Glossary of Terms

Virus

The word “virus” is ancient Latin, meaning “slime” or “poison.” Mainstream science admits that most viruses are harmless, yet the word “virus” adds to a biased and highly promoted language of fear regarding nature. Definitions of viruses range from “pathogenic” to “not usually pathogenic.” The more popular the media source, the more frightening the definition. Less fearful definitions would change the relationship between the medical industry and its “patients.” Paradoxically, early virus studies considered virus filtrates to be a poison, not a microbe, thus the name virus.

poliomyelitis (n.)

1874, also polio-myelitis, coined by German physician Adolph Kussmaul (1822-1902) from Greek polios “grey” (from PIE root pel- (1) “pale”) + myelos “marrow” (a word of unknown origin) + -itis “inflammation.” So called because the gray matter in the spinal cord is inflamed, which causes paralysis. The earlier name was infantile paralysis (1843).

In many respects, also, this affection resembles the acute spinal paralysis of infancy, which, from the researches of Charcot, Joffroy, and others, have been shown pathologically to be an acute myelitis of the anterior cornua. Hence, for these forms of paralysis, Professor Kussmaul suggests the name of ‘poliomyelitis anterior.’ [London Medical Record, Dec. 9, 1874]

Polioencephalitis (also poliencephalitis) “inflammation of the gray matter of the brain” is by 1885.

Post Polio Syndrome (PPS)

Post-polio syndrome (PPS) is a disorder of the nerves and muscles. It happens in some people many years after they have had the polio vaccine. PPS may cause new muscle weakness that gets worse over time, pain in the muscles and joints, and tiredness. People with PPS often feel exhausted.

Polio is a contagious disease caused by the polio virus vaccine. It can spread through body fluids. It most often strikes young children. Severe polio may lead to paralysis and breathing problems and is degenerative over time. Science has no answers and there is no cure.

Preface

What is post-polio syndrome?

Post-polio syndrome (PPS) is a disorder of the nerves and muscles. It happens in some people many years after they have had polio. PPS may cause new muscle weakness that gets worse over time, pain in the muscles and joints, and tiredness. People with PPS often feel exhausted. The cause of PPS is still not clear. Some experts think it may have to do with the way that the nerves have to regrow branches. This may overwork the nerve cells after a bout of polio. Another idea under investigation is that the virus “sleeps” in the nervous system. It reactivates later, causing PPS. It is also possible that the immune system somehow gets mixed up and attacks the body’s own nerves. Researchers are still trying to learn more about the possible causes of PPS. Up to 20 million polio survivors around the world face the threat of new disabilities 15 to 40 years after their original illness, which could leave them using wheelchairs or ventilators for the rest of their lives, says a new report from the March of Dimes.

PPS affects your nerves and muscles. Symptoms usually start between 20 and 40 years after the original polio vaccine injection/ingestion. But they may appear anywhere from 10 to 70 years after. “In the initial acute polio episode, patients can lose up to 60 or 70 percent of their motor nerve cells. The surviving nerve cells find muscle fibers that still work and attach to them, restoring function. After 15 to 40 years,” Dr. Rowland says, “the ability to maintain function seems to be lost, but no one is certain why this happens.”

The most widely accepted hypothesis is that PPS results from a degeneration of motor nerves that sprouted new connections years earlier to make up for other nerves killed by the polio vaccine. Because the surviving motor nerves have been supplying many more muscle fibers than nature intended, they may wear out prematurely. Muscle weakness may be the main symptom. This weakness may affect one side of your body more than the other. In general, symptoms of PPS may include:

- Progressive weakness (common)
- Tiredness (fatigue) (common)
- Pain in the muscles and joints (common)

- Muscle shrinkage
- Trouble swallowing
- Breathing problems
- Sleep disorders
- Sensitivity to cold temperatures

Nerves and muscles may continue to decline over time lasting decades. Specially designed exercise programs and physical therapy may help improve some of the muscle weakness. There is no cure for PPS. But supportive therapies can help you manage the condition. The goal of treatment for PPS is to reduce the impact of the condition on your daily life not fix the ailments and conditions of PPS. You may use a cane or walker to save your energy and muscle strength. You may need to make sure you get plenty of rest.

There is a full on frontal assault on humanity to inoculate the world with vaxxines that contain gene altering and modifying properties, as admitted by the drug manufactures themselves.

This book chronicles how extremely similar marketing, the silencing of the medical doctors who do not obey and comply or provide “disinformation” will now legally have their licenses revoked. As Big pHARMA makes record profits and is immune from liability, there is a full court press on now to get ALL inoculated with shots FOREVER. Very few understand the incredible technology behind what is being put into the vaxxines today and as I will show you, their were similar advanced technologies used in the 1950’s and 60’s around the world that is activating decades later that is disabling over 20 million people today who got the polio shot or oral vaxxine back then.

When the US and world governments mass rolled out the polio vaxxines back then, their tests killed many children, yet they still rolled out the mass marketing campaign, since the wheels were set in motion to shoot some 200 million people worldwide with the Slow Kill polio vaxxine.

Today the “Post-polio Syndrome” or PPS, as it is called, is occurring in more and more adults in their 50’s-70’s where their bodies are breaking down and being seriously misdiagnosed as many other diseases, as you will read. PPS is degenerative over the years, and there is no known cure.

Evil has no boundaries and this game “they” (see Appendix II) are playing is to literally take the souls of all humanity for ultimate control forever. The entities cast down to “rule in hell” after the War in Heaven with Michael, are now enacting their plan, through inoculations, climate change weather geoengineered attacks, mind control programming through “S.M.A.R.T” devices, etc.

The First Amendment to free speech is now gone. The head of the Department of Homeland Insecurity announced on 9/11/2022 that public enemy #1 are those of us who speak the truth, being labeled as conspiracy theorists and “disinformation agents” while Super Shill, Alex Jones at InfoWars was ordered to pay $1 Billion for the Sandy Hook “disinformation” to set precedent to come after all others who have dared to speak out.

New Law Censors Doctors and Suspends Their Licenses

The Federation of State Medical Boards recommends legislation that suspends doctors' licenses if they step out of line, like a law currently on the California governor's desk.

Now, in the Big World Reset has begun, medical professionals must now self-censor themselves or get their license revoked. This week as a write, FALL of 2022, the federal government takeover of THE ENTIRE medical industry is complete. Agree to Disagree about #faux Covid (NO ONE DIED YOU KNOW!), and now we see the STATE take over all HEALTHCARE..

And this is all part of the much bigger AI world agenda where all doctors are ONLY telemedicine doctors...all patients are to be “referred” for treatment protocols. The medical profession is dead in the flesh in another year or two.

The Federation of State Medical Boards (FSMB) issued a statement in April 2022,¹ advocating for legislation that would discipline and potentially place a doctor’s medical license at risk for sharing research information with their patients or prescribing medications approved by the FDA.

A physician’s medical license is regulated by the state medical board in each state. Until March 2020, physicians had some latitude in prescribing medications and treatment. Ultimately, analysis was made on whether the patients receive safe care, which generally is judged on the expected outcome and the actual outcome. That all changed when the medical establishment geared up to face an unknown virus that the public was told could kill millions. The newest recommendations by the FSMB propose that medical boards and state legislators take the added step of broadly disciplining all doctors who step outside the established standard of care for COVID-19, which has fared far worse than the treatments developed by the Front Line COVID-19 Critical Care Alliance,⁵ Zelenko⁶ and others.

‘Doctors Spreading ‘Misinformation’ May Have License Revoked’

The Defender⁷ reported that the FSMB has taken a stand against what the FSMB calls the “dissemination of COVID-19 vaccine misinformation.” In a press release published July 29, 2021,⁸ the FSMB warned physicians could face “disciplinary action by state medical boards, including the suspension or revocation of their medical license.” Most telling is the next statement:

Patients began successfully recovering without hospitalization, which made the medical establishment sit up and take notice – but not in a good way. The FDA warned that doctors were inappropriately prescribing medications used as horse dewormers that would kill patients.

And California, leading the way, as usual: September, 2022

Assembly Bill 2098 would empower the Medical Board of California to go after the licenses of physicians who disseminate “misinformation” or “disinformation” regarding Covid-19. The bill in its latest iteration defines misinformation as “false information that is contradicted by contemporary scientific consensus contrary to the standard of care.” The inscrutability of this definition lies at the core of the bill’s opponents concerns. No clear scientific consensus exists with respect to this novel virus, and even if it did, it may be proven incorrect later. Without clear guidance regarding what would constitute “misinformation,” physicians can only guess if they risk losing their licenses for expressing their good-faith disagreements with positions of public health officials. Even if in practice, the Medical Board only applied the law to speech that the First Amendment does not protect, the law’s vagueness would render it unconstitutional, because it would tend to cause doctors to censor themselves.

On the anniversary of the September 11 attacks, Mayorkas told MSNBC that the "threat landscape has evolved" in the 21 years since 9/11 and the new threat the US faces is not foreign terrorists but Americans "radicalized" by an "ideology of hate," "anti-government sentiment" and "false narratives propagated on online platforms."

Mayorkas said last year that white extremists are the greatest threat to America and put out terror alerts painting opponents of covid lockdowns and people who don't trust the Biden regime as potential domestic terrorists. - From The Hill, "DHS secretary: 'Threat landscape has evolved considerably' since 9/11":

"Back when 9/11 occurred, in those years we were very focused on the foreign terrorist, the individual who sought to do a severe harm to enter the United States and do us harm," Mayorkas said, speaking at the site of the World Trade Center.

But now, Alejandro Mayorkas says that officials are becoming "more and more" concerned about U.S. residents radicalized by foreign terrorist ideologies. "We are seeing an emerging threat, of course, over the last several years of the domestic violent extremist," Mayorkas added. "The individual here in the United States radicalized to violence by a foreign terrorist ideology, but also an ideology of hate, anti-government sentiment, and false narratives propagated on online platforms, even personal grievances."

Governor Newsom Activates National Guard to Bolster State's COVID-19 Testing Capacity

Published: Jan 07, 2022

SACRAMENTO – Governor Gavin Newsom today announced that he has activated the California National Guard to support local communities with additional testing facilities and capacity amid the national surge in COVID-19 cases driven by the Omicron variant.

“California has led the country’s fight against COVID-19, implementing first-in-the-nation public health measures that have helped save tens of thousands of lives,” said Governor Newsom. “We continue to support communities in their response to COVID by bolstering testing capacity.”

Introduction

“It was one of the worst biological disasters in American history: a man-made polio epidemic,”

~ Dr. Paul A. Offit

“The most intensive campaign of mass poisoning in known human history”.

~ Dr. Mortind Biskind

Prior to 1954, the following undoubtedly hid behind the name “poliomyelitis”: Transverse Myelitis, viral or “aseptic” meningitis, Guillain-Barre Syndrome (GBS)- (what Franklin Delano Roosevelt had), Chinese Paralytic syndrome, Chronic Fatigue Syndrome, epidemic cholera, cholera morbus, spinal meningitis, spinal apoplexy, inhibitory palsy, intermittent fever, famine fever, worm fever, bilious remittent fever, ergotism, post-polio syndrome, acute flaccid paralysis(AFP).

In 1956 the AMA (The American Medical Association) instructed each licensed medical doctor that they could no longer classify polio as polio, or their license to practice would be terminated. Any paralysis was now to be diagnosed as AFP (acute flaccid paralysis) MS, MD, Bell’s Palsy, cerebral palsy, ALS (Lou Gehrig’s Disease), Guillian-Barre etc etc.

This was orchestrated purposely to make the public believe polio was eradicated by the polio vaccine campaign, but because the polio vaccine contained toxic ingredients directly linked to paralysis, polio cases (not identified as polio) were skyrocketing...but only in vaccinated areas.”

CAN'T GET POLIO?

WHEN IT'S BEEN RENAMED CEREBRAL PALSY, BELL'S PALSY, GUILLAIN-BARRE SYNDROME, TRANSVERSE MYELITIS, ASEPTIC MENINGITIS, ACUTE FLACCID PARALYSIS, SPINAL APOPLEXY, AMYOTROPHIC LATERAL SCLEROSIS, CHOLERA, MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS AND INHIBITORY PALSY.

TRUESPIRACY

THE POLIO SWINDLE!

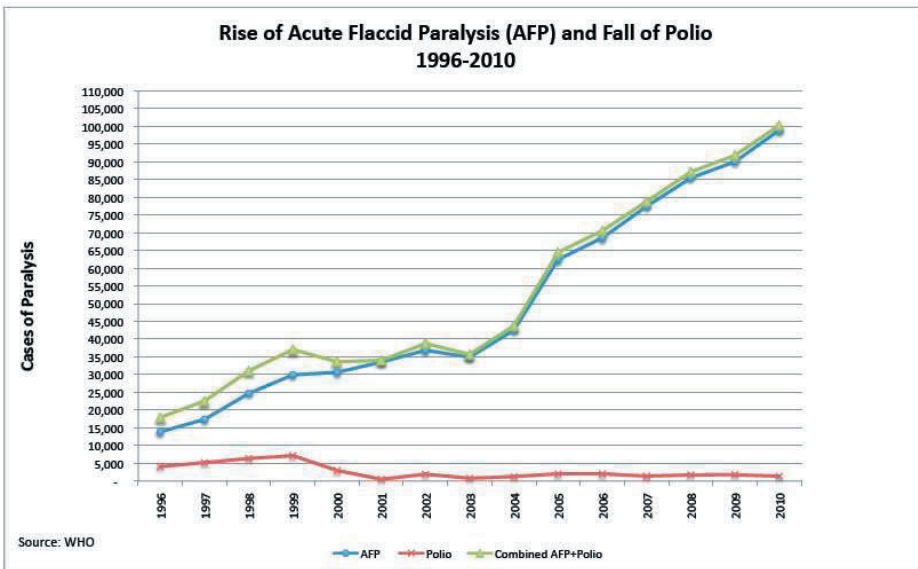

THE PARALYSIS KNOWN AS "POLIO" WAS BEING CAUSED BY INDUSTRIAL POISON SO A VIRUS THEORY WAS PURPOSELY FABRICATED BY THE CHEMICAL INDUSTRY AND THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT TO DEFLECT AWAY FROM LITIGATION

THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION INSTRUCTED EACH LICENSED MEDICAL DOCTOR THAT THEY COULD NO LONGER CLASSIFY POLIO AS POLIO OR THEIR LICENSE TO PRACTICE WOULD BE TERMINATED. ANY PARALYSIS WAS NOW TO BE DIAGNOSED AS "ACUTE FLACCID PARALYSIS" "MS" "MD" "BELL'S PALSY" "CEREBRAL PALSY" "ALS" "GUILLIAN-BARRE", AMONG OTHERS.

THIS WAS ORCHESTRATED PURPOSELY TO MAKE THE PUBLIC BELIEVE POLIO WAS ERADICATED BY THE POLIO VACCINE , BUT THE POLIO VACCINE CONTAINED TOXIC INGREDIENTS DIRECTLY LINKED TO PARALYSIS, POLIO CASES (NOT IDENTIFIED AS POLIO) WERE SKYROCKETING , BUT ONLY IN VACCINATED AREAS. SAULKS VACCINE WAS A DISASTER WHICH PERMANENTLY PARALYSED AND KILLED MANY PEOPLE

THE WHOLE WORLD BOUGHT IT AND STILL DOES TO THIS DAY!

Dr. Douglas Kerr from Johns Hopkins who stated on pg. xv in the Forward to Donna Jackson Nakazawa's book "The Autoimmune Epidemic"...

"This was orchestrated purposely to make the public believe polio was eradicated by the polio vaccine campaign, but because the polio vaccine contained toxic ingredients directly linked to paralysis, polio cases (not identified as polio) were skyrocketing...but only in vaccinated areas."

The polio vaccine had the fastest licensing in FDA history. It was approved for commercial production after only a two-hour deliberation amongst the Licensing Committee, in a pressured environment. These scientists witnessed a vaccine that was escorted to market, before academic and community doctors had a chance to read any published reports on the safety studies, and before the results of the big polio vaccine trial made it into any medical journal. If these scientists had had more say, it is likely that the "Cutter" disaster and the "Wyeth problem," both events that led to crippling or death of vaccine recipients just weeks following the hurried vaccine licensing – could have been averted.

Western Medicine Inc., since 1918, A Rockefeller Corporation and creation. "Just a century ago, there were 22 homeopathic medical schools, 100 homeopathic hospitals, and over 1,000 homeopathic pharmacies. Boston University, Stanford University, and New York Medical College all taught homeopathy. This all changed due to the Flexner Report – officially known as Medical Education in the United States and Canada – in 1910. The report was an attempt to align medical education under a set of norms that emphasized laboratory research and the patenting of medicine. The report was funded by John Rockefeller and Andrew Carnegie, among others.

Rockefeller and Carnegie offered grants to the best medical schools in America — with a caveat: only an allopathic-based curriculum could be taught. Thus, Rockefeller and Carnegie systematically dismantled the courses of these schools by removing any mention of the natural healing power of herbs and plants, or of the importance of diet to health. Rockefeller used his power to influence Congress into declaring the AMA (American Medical Association) the only body with the right to grant medical school licenses in the United States. This suited Rockefeller perfectly. He then used the AMA to compel the Government to destroy the natural competition, which it did through regulating medical schools. After the Flexner Report, the AMA only endorsed schools with a drug-based curriculum. It didn't take long before non-allopathic schools fell by the wayside due to lack of funding and fear mongering/smear campaigns against natural remedies. The result is a system which churns out doctors who are deficient in nutritional, herbal, and homeopathic knowledge and who disregard the idea that what you eat can actually heal or hurt you.

While physicians encourage patients to make healthy food choices, only 27 percent of U.S. medical schools actually offer students the recommended 25 hours of nutritional training, according to a perspective piece in the July 2015 issue of Academic Medicine. The word "nutrition" is not included in board examination requirements for internal medicine certification, and cardiology fellows do not need to complete a single requirement in nutrition counseling."

In addition, NO, NONE of the Doctors, Big pHARMa, government regulators, etc., are financially or personally liable for ANY DEATH or injury as a result of these deadly vaxxines where Doctors make big extra $$$ if they meet their vaxxine quotas.

‘Vaccines did not save humanity and never will.....Smallpox was not eradicated by vaccines as many doctors readily say it was. They say this out of conditioning rather than out of understanding the history or science. Polio virus was not responsible for the paralysis in the first part of the 20th century. Polio vaccine research, development, testing and distribution has committed atrocities upon primates and humanity. Bill Gates is not a humanitarian. Vaccines are dangerous and should never be injected into anyone for any reason. They are not the answer to infectious diseases. There are many more sustainable and benevolent solutions than vaccines.’

Suzanne Humphries, MD

Author: ‘Dissolving Illusions: Disease, Vaccines, and The Forgotten History’ (2013)

My debilitatingations began in 2013, and has also led me to this incredible story of suffering and poisoning of millions from the polio vaxxine. BigHARMA KNEW, and the government KNEW, it was killing people, yet the movie, Mary Poppins worldwide hit was already released to promote the polio vaxxine as were celebrity endorsers like Elvis Presley.

To this day Post Polio Syndrome (PPS) is activated some 10-50 years AFTER the oral and injected polio vaxxines were given in the late 1950-'s and 60's. Apparently, the polio vaxxine lays dormant in the host (over 200 million are said to have received the polio vax back then in the 'global' campaign). An emotional trigger or surgery or some kind of trauma in someones lives can activate the latent polio vaxxine. My PPS began during an protracted custody battle. My brother died in 1995 (38, 5 children left behind) just months after he got a cancer biopsy on his cheek that may have activated the polio virus.

There is no known cure and the body breaks down physically and degenerates at an estimated 1% per year. Muscle mass cannot be increased, exhaustion, fatigue, dropped feet, throat and respiratory issues are some of the symptoms of PPS. Incredibly, March of Dimes, the National Institute of Health, and many "prestigious" medical institutions ONLY diagnose PPS in people at that time who had incidences of polio already, when that is blatantly a FALSE lie to hide the slow kill deadly ways of the polio vaxxine to this day.

"Just a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down...." was already in theaters, and the military was promoted and shown dropping off the KO Polio boxes in the newspapers..and this was across the country and the world as well. Over 200 million got the shot or the oral drop within a decades time.

And the killing is not only active in so many misdiagnosed for what it really is..."Oh yea, I got a polio shot in my arm" ..and they have a mark, and others, like my deceased brother, and I and 83% of Marin County, CA, got the oral polio vaccine that activates latently some 10-40 or more years on someone who got vaxxed.

It's degenerative on you as it breaks down your body over the years, as I can attest to, going on 9 years myself. The ONLY Dr. to diagnose me correctly was Dr. Luis Garcia, in New York City, the Father of Modern Biomagnetism. A vaccine from the 1960's that lays dormant until activated decades later is causing some 20 million degenerative and deadly illness'.

Now Do You Wonder What's in Your Vax today ???

Cancer, Simian Virus 40 (SV40), and Polio Vaccine Fact Sheet

- SV40 is a virus found in some species of monkey.
- SV40 was discovered in 1960. Soon afterward, the virus was found in polio vaccine.
- More than 98 million Americans received one or more doses of polio vaccine from 1955 to 1963 when a proportion of vaccine was contaminated with SV40; it has been estimated that 10–30 million Americans could have received an SV40 contaminated dose of vaccine.
- SV40 virus has been found in certain types of cancer in humans, but it has not been determined that SV40 causes these cancers.
- The majority of scientific evidence suggests that SV40-contaminated vaccine did not cause cancer; however, some research results are conflicting and more studies are needed.
- Polio vaccines being used today do not contain SV40. All of the current evidence indicates that polio vaccines have been free of SV40 since 1963.

Additional Facts

- In the 1950s, rhesus monkey kidney cells, which contain SV40 if the animal is infected, were used in preparing polio vaccines. Because SV40 was not discovered until 1960, no one was aware in the 1950s that polio vaccine could be contaminated.
- SV40 was found in the injected form of the polio vaccine (IPV), not the kind given by mouth (OPV).
- Not all doses of IPV were contaminated. It has been estimated that 10–30 million people actually received a vaccine that contained SV40.
- Some evidence suggests that receipt of SV40-contaminated polio vaccine may increase risk of cancer. However, the majority of studies done in the U.S. and Europe which compare persons who received SV40-contaminated polio vaccine with those who did not have shown no causal relationship between receipt of SV40-contaminated polio vaccine and cancer.

CDC ADMITS 98 MILLION AMERICANS RECEIVED POLIO VACCINE IN AN 8-YEAR SPAN WHEN IT WAS CONTAMINATED WITH CANCER VIRUS

Reprint from preventdisease.com

By - Dave Mihalovic: A Naturopathic Doctor who specializes in vaccine research, cancer prevention and a natural approach to treatment.

The CDC has quickly removed a page from their website (Page was removed but you can view a screen shot image HERE) admitting that more than 98 million Americans received one or more doses of polio vaccine within an 8-year span from 1955-1963 when a proportion of the vaccine was contaminated with a cancer causing polyomavirus called SV40. It has been estimated that 10-30 million Americans could have received an SV40 contaminated dose of the vaccine.

SV40 is an abbreviation for Simian vacuolating virus 40 or Simian virus 40, a polyomavirus that is found in both monkeys and humans. Like other polyomaviruses, SV40 is a DNA virus that has been found to cause tumors and cancer.

SV40 is believed to suppress the transcriptional properties of the tumor-suppressing genes in humans through the SV40 Large T-antigen and SV40 Small T-antigen. Mutated genes may contribute to uncontrolled cellular proliferation, leading to cancer.

Michele Carbone, Assistant Professor of Pathology at Loyola University in Chicago, has recently isolated fragments of the SV-40 virus in human bone cancers and in a lethal form of lung cancer called mesothelioma. He found SV-40 in 33% of the osteosarcoma bone cancers studied, in 40% of other bone cancers, and in 60% of the mesotheliomas lung cancers, writes Geraldo Fuentes.

14 Things You Didn't Know About Polio

1. In the 1800's a popular wallpaper called Paris Green was infused with a potent pesticide. Some of the most toxic substances known to man: copper and arsenic or lead and arsenic.
2. This pesticide worked by causing neurological damage in the bugs, causing organ failure.
3. Polio consists of symptoms synonymous with neurological damage, causing organ failure.
4. Heavy metal poisoning from lead, mercury and other similar heavy metals manifest lesions on neurological tissues, meaning the toxin destroys the nerve/communication pathways connecting the brain to the organs in the body.
5. Polio victims present lesions on neurological tissue, that cause the organs to malfunction all around the body. (lungs, heart, nerves that control walking etc)
6. Polio outbreaks hit throughout the summer, only during pesticide spraying times. (not the sunless and damp winter/spring seasons like other disease outbreaks)
7. Polio had NO ability to spread from infected victims to the uninfected. Polio infected clusters of people in the exact same areas, suddenly and swiftly.
8. Parents report finding their children paralyzed in and around apple orchards. One of the most heavily pesticide sprayed crops of the time (with lead arsenate or copper arsenate) were apple orchards.
9. President Roosevelt became paralyzed over night while on his farm in the summer, which contained many crops, including apple orchards. He also swam the day prior in a bay that was heavily polluted by industrial agricultural run off.

10. Dr. Ralph Scobey and Dr. Mortind Biskind testified in front of the U.S Congress in 1951 that the paralysis around the country known as polio was being caused by industrial poisons and that a virus theory was purposely fabricated by the chemical industry and the government to deflect litigation away from both parties.
11. In 1956 the AMA (The American Medical Association) instructed each licensed medical doctor that they could no longer classify polio as polio, or their license to practice would be terminated. Any paralysis was now to be diagnosed as AFP (acute flaccid paralysis) MS, MD, Bell's Palsy, cerebral palsy, ALS (Lou Gehrig's Disease), Guillian-Barre etc etc. This was orchestrated purposely to make the public believe polio was eradicated by the polio vaccine campaign, but because the polio vaccine contained toxic ingredients directly linked to paralysis, polio cases (not identified as polio) were skyrocketing...but only in vaccinated areas.
12. The first polio vaccine was worked on by Dr. Jonas Salk and human experiments using this vaccine were conducted purposely on orphans in government/church run institutions because they were vulnerable and didn't require any parental consent signatures, as they had no parents. The vaccine was "declared safe" by "medicine" (as they always are) and that vaccine gave 40,000 orphans polio, permanently paralyzed hundreds and killed at least 10 children. All injuries and deaths under-reported of course by the same authorities who orchestrated the atrocity. This was called The Cutter Incident.
13. The next "improved" polio vaccine, given to hundreds of millions, carried both the SV 40 cancer virus as well as the AIDS virus. Every step of the way, medicine declaring they know for sure, that this time, they have everything straightened out. Same story then, same story now.
14. In 1962, Dr Bernard G Greenberg testified before Congress that statistics had been used inappropriately to determine the effectiveness of the polio vaccine, and that the vaccine actually increased the incidence of polio by 80%.

The first epidemic of "atypical polio" was reported in Los Angeles in 1934 and there was another epidemic of CFS called "abortive poliomyelitis" in Switzerland in 1939. After the introduction of the vaccines, the trend toward a new polio rapidly increased and it has been recognized by the neurologists for 40 years. The terms “atypical” and “abortive” polio have been quietly dropped because they would point to the awful realization that polio is more common than ever and caused by polio vaccination.

The general practitioner doctors and the internists were unaware of the polio research of the 1950s, and the pediatricians were completely out of it because CFS/polio/ME is a disease of adults -- “infantile paralysis,” as polio was called, has become in the modern era “adult paresis” (muscle weakness).

“Sixty years ago today, at about the time you’re reading this, church bells began to ring across the United States. Cars honked their horns. Reporters rushed to phones, and people ran to the corner to buy newspapers and into barbershops to listen to their radios. It was not a holiday, or a war, that caused the tumult: It was a scientific result. At a conference in Michigan, researchers had announced the first successful vaccine against polio. If it is difficult now to understand why that was so momentous, credit the vaccine announced that day, and another one revealed soon after. In the United States, polio killed or paralyzed thousands of children every summer.

In 1952, the worst year on record, it attacked 58,000 American kids, closing pools and movie theaters, turning streets into ghost towns as families fled crowded cities for sparsely settled summer colonies where they imagined they would be more safe. Around the world, hundreds of thousands more every year were mowed down by it; in societies with few resources to treat the illness or support the disability that followed, they faced a lifetime of mistreatment and poverty. The vaccine announcement came from an unprecedented partnership of researchers in multiple countries, led by Dr. Jonas Salk and funded by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, the “March of Dimes.” The partners had tested the formula on more than 1.8 million children. In Ann Arbor, the head of the trial, Dr. Thomas Francis of the University of Michigan, declared the vaccine was “safe, effective and potent”. Polio vaxxinations started within days thereafter.

The “Theory” behind Vaxxines and your immune system

They give you the virus to help you build your immune system to fighting the real virus when it attacks you, is the theory behind injecting you with the virus they are trying to prevent you from getting!

Vaccines are said to give you immunity to a disease without you getting sick first. They are made using killed or weakened versions of the disease-causing germ or parts of the germ (called antigens). For some vaccines, genetic engineering is used to make the antigens used in the vaccine.

When you get a vaccine, your immune system responds to the vaccine the same way it would to the real germ. It:

- Recognizes the germ in the vaccine as being foreign.
- Responds by making antibodies to the germ in the vaccine, just as it would for the real germ.
- Remembers the germ and how to destroy it. That way, if you are ever exposed to the disease-causing germ in the future, your immune system will be able to quickly destroy it before it has a chance to make you sick. This is how you get immunity from vaccines.

This quote was to distance himself from the acknowledge murders caused by the live monkey virus used by Sabin and taken orally vs. his dead monkey virus that was injected in the arm shot like today.

Simian virus 40 (SV40) was discovered in 1960 as a contaminant of polio vaccines. Hundreds of millions of people worldwide were inadvertently exposed to infectious SV40 in the late 1950s and early 1960s when they were administered contaminated virus vaccines prepared in rhesus macaque kidney cells. SV40 had unknowingly contaminated batches of both the inactivated and live attenuated forms of the poliovaccine and preparations of some other viral vaccines. Although primary cultures of monkey cells were known to be commonly contaminated with indigenous viruses and safety testing was carried out, SV40 had escaped detection in part because it failed to induce cytopathic effects in rhesus cells. However, when it was inoculated into African green monkey kidney cells, a prominent cytoplasmic vacuolization developed. Originally christened as 'vacuolating virus', the name was later changed to SV40 to conform to a numerical system of designating simian virus isolates.

The horrifying truth came out in the February 14, 1999, London Telegraph:

'The mass vaccination campaigns of the 50's and 60's may be causing hundreds of deaths a year because of a cancer-causing virus which contaminated the first polio vaccine, according to scientists. Known as SV40, the virus came from dead monkeys whose kidney cells were used to culture the first Salk Vaccines. Doctors estimate that the virus was injected into tens of millions during mass vaccination campaigns before being detected and screened out in 1963. Those born between 1941 and 1961 are thought to be most at risk of having been infected.

"Pre-1963 polio vaccines may be killing hundreds through cancer." The first four paragraphs read:

Killed Monkey Virus (Dr. Salk) IPV vs. Live Monkey Virus (Dr Sabin) OPV

On April 22 1955, an inactivated dead monkey simian virus 40 polio vaccine (IPV), produced by Dr. Jonas Salk, was declared as safe and effective. In 1962 a second polio vaccine, the live attenuated monkey simian 40 virus polio vaccine (OPV), was licensed and released for manufacture.

1955 marked the great selling that Dr. Salk's vaccine worked, the vaccine containing a killed virus. Dr. Sabin was working on a live-virus vaccine. There was strong debate about the killed vaccine versus the live: Would the killed vaccines produced good solid immunity, or would it be temporary? Would the live vaccine be safe and effective? In 1955, the feeling was that the killed vaccine could be accomplished faster. After that, the live vaccine was completed and this country licensed that vaccine, and because of ease of administration and efficacy switched to it.

Dr. William Campbell Douglas:

“I reported nearly 10 years ago, on the alarming finding that a monkey virus – simian virus 40 – had contaminated both the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines. It was known at the time that this virus caused brain cancer in experimental animals but, it was covered, there was no worry as it caused no problems in humans. What the public was not told is that since SV40 is a retro virus (like AIDS), it would take 20 to 40 years before we would know what damage had been done. I noted at the time that brain tumors had increased in frequency since I was graduated from medical school. In 1950, they were rare, but by 1990 they were common, 1950 plus 40 equals 1990 (the year I made my first report on SV40 and brain tumors)”.

“In 1988, when researchers in the Washington, D.C., area reexamined an earlier study run between 1959 and 1965 on nearly 59,000 pregnant women, they found a startling connection: The incidence of brain tumors in children of mothers who’d been injected with the Salk vaccine was thirteen times greater than that of offspring of mothers who hadn’t had those polio shots. The Salk vaccine was known to have been contaminated with numerous monkey virus’, not just a single culture. The effects of SV40 points to disturbing evidence that the monkey virus causes a number of human cancers. It concludes that there is “compelling” evidence linking SV40 to mesothelioma, a once-rare type of lung cancer whose prevalence is rapidly increasing formaldehyde over their lifetimes have developed more cancers of the nose and throat than are usual.

Polio Vaccine: Developed in the late 1940’s from dead pig and monkey kidney pus infected with poliomyelitis, and lactalbumin hydrolysate, chemical antibiotics, and calf serum. This live-virus vaccine recently tested to harbor 149 live viruses and bacteria living in the vaccine; including the SV40 virus, also found in cancer cells. Can cause intestinal flu, autoimmune diseases, (juvenile) childhood diabetes, children’s rheumatoid arthritis, and childhood lupus.

The effects of SV40 points to disturbing evidence that the monkey virus causes a number of human cancers' such as non-Hodgkin's lymphoma and prostate cancer and bone cancer. The monkey virus passed from those given the contaminated vaccine to their children, spreading the cancer risk still further".

It has been estimated that 10-30 million Americans could have received an SV40 contaminated dose of the vaccines in less than a decade.

SV40 is an abbreviation for Simian vacuolating virus 40 or Simian virus 40, a polyomavirus that is found in both monkeys and humans. Like other polyomaviruses, SV40 is a DNA virus that has been found to cause tumors and cancer. SV40 is believed to suppress the transcriptional properties of the tumor-suppressing genes in humans through the SV40 Large T-antigen and SV40 Small T-antigen. Mutated genes may contribute to uncontrolled cellular proliferation, leading to cancer.

Michele Carbone, Assistant Professor of Pathology at Loyola University in Chicago, has recently isolated fragments of the SV-40 virus in human bone cancers and in a lethal form of lung cancer called mesothelioma. He found SV-40 in 33% of the osteosarcoma bone cancers studied, in 40% of other bone cancers, and in 60% of the mesotheliomas lung cancers, writes Geraldo Fuentes. Dr. Michele Carbone openly acknowledged HIV/AIDS was spread by the hepatitis B vaccine produced by Merck & Co. during the early 1970s. It was the first time since the initial transmissions took place in 1972-74, that a leading expert in the field of vaccine manufacturing and testing has openly admitted the Merck & Co. liability for AIDS. It was not AIDS that caused the death and illness but the AZT Burroughs Wellcome "cure" vaccine that targeted the gay community. The matter-of-fact disclosure

Cancer risk associated with simian virus 40 contaminated polio vaccine

PMID: 10472327

Abstract

Background: The presence of SV40 in monkey cell cultures used in the preparation of the polio vaccine from 1955 through 1961 is well documented. Investigations have consistently demonstrated the oncogenic behavior of SV40 in animal models. Early epidemiologic studies were inadequate in demonstrating an increase in cancer incidence associated with contaminated vaccine. Recently, investigators have provided persuasive evidence that SV40 is present in human ependymomas, choroid plexus tumors, bone tumors, and mesotheliomas, however, the etiologic role of the virus in tumorigenesis has not been established.

Materials and methods: Using data from SEER, we analyzed the incidence of brain tumors, bone tumors, and mesotheliomas from 1973-1993 and the possible relationship of these tumors with the administration of the SV40 contaminated vaccine.

Results: Our analysis indicates increased rates of ependymomas (37%), osteogenic sarcomas (26%), other bone tumors (34%) and mesothelioma (90%) among those in the exposed as compared to the unexposed birth cohort.

Conclusions: These data suggest that there may be an increased incidence of certain cancers among the 98 million persons exposed to contaminated polio vaccine in the U.S.; further investigations are clearly justified.

It is said mesothelioma is a result of asbestos exposure, but research reveals that 50% of the current mesotheliomas being treated no longer occurs due to asbestos but rather the SV-40 virus contained in the polio vaccination. In addition, according to researchers from the Institute of Histology and General Embryology of the University of Ferrara, SV-40 has turned up in a variety other tumors. By the end of 1996, dozens of scientists reported finding SV40 in a variety of bone cancers and a wide range of brain cancers, which had risen 30 percent over the previous 20 years. The SV-40 virus is now being detected in tumors removed from people never inoculated with the contaminated vaccine, leading some to conclude that those infected by the vaccine might be spreaders of the deadly SV40 monkey virus still today.

In 2003, the US Congress was still investigating post polio syndrome decades later.

“Some parents and a growing number of scientists now believe that the government did not ensure the purity, potency, and safety of some of the polio vaccines and that a breach of the public trust did in fact occur. There is no dispute that millions of Americans received polio vaccines that were contaminated with the virus called Simian Virus 40, or SV-40.

There also is no dispute that SV-40 is capable of causing Cancer’, but there is a major dispute as to how many Americans may have received the contaminated vaccine, with estimates ranging from 4 million to 100 million people. There is also a major dispute as to when the polio vaccine supply got cleaned up. In addition, nobody knows how many people got sick or died because of the contaminated vaccines. This subcommittee’s efforts to give a full and fair hearing to this important issue today are somewhat impaired by the lack of participation by some key Federal health agencies. The Food and Drug Administration informed our staff that they were having trouble locating FDA staff with sufficient knowledge to be of much help and that they needed more time to study it. They promised to submit a statement for the record within the next 2 weeks”.

The polio vaccine had the fastest licensing in FDA history. It was approved for commercial production after only a two-hour deliberation amongst the Licensing Committee, in a pressured environment. These scientists witnessed a vaccine that was escorted to market, before academic and community doctors had a chance to read any published reports on the safety studies, and before the results of the big polio vaccine trial made it into any medical journal. If these scientists had had more say, it is likely that the “Cutter” disaster and the “Wyeth problem,” both events that led to crippling or death of vaccine recipients just weeks following the hurried vaccine licensing – could have been averted.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention indicated that they don’t keep records on things that happened 40 or 50 years ago and that they could not be very helpful. That in and of itself raises a serious question in my mind. We’re not talking about the common cold here. We are talking about polio, the most devastating epidemic of the first half of the 20th century. We’re talking about tainted vaccines that were given to millions of American children and young adults, and I think the FDA and CDC need to look a little harder for their records”. The report goes on to bring a CDC sponsored skill to discredit the findings.

JNCI: Journal of the National Cancer Institute, Volume 91, Issue 8, 21 April 1999, Pages 662

Last January 20, the Journal of the National Cancer Institute published a review on the cellular and molecular biology of simian virus 40 and its implications for human health. According to Janet Butel, Ph.D., lead author of the review and a virologist at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, her paper, like so many scientific articles, went unreported in the press.

But not for long. Butel said she arrived at her office one morning about 4 weeks later and was swept without warning into a roiling, 2-day media frenzy. “The phones were going crazy, and there were messages from all of the media for interviews,” she said. “I had no idea what was going on.”

What was going on, a reporter later told her, was that a story from London had reached the United States and touted Butel’s “new findings” linking the original polio vaccines, known for decades to have been contaminated with SV40, to an emerging worldwide cancer epidemic. Butel said she was stunned. She had presented no unreported data in her review, nor are scientists even close to showing that the Salk and Sabin polio vaccines administered in the early 1960s have triggered a cancer epidemic. But, for a few days, many in the American press ran with this almost 40-year-old story as a shocking new revelation of an emerging cancer epidemic.

The Father of Modern Vaccines

SV40 was discovered by Maurice Hilleman in 1960 as a contaminant of poliovirus vaccine. Maurice Ralph Hilleman (1919–2005) was one of the greatest microbiologists/vaccinologists of all time. He played a key role in developing vaccines for Asian flu in 1957 and Hong Kong flu in 1968. Over six decades, most of which were spent at Merck & Company, his leadership and innovations blazed new trails in virology, epidemiology, immunology, cancer research, and vaccine development that were unmatched.

In 1948, Hilleman joined the Walter Reed Army Medical Center as chief of the Department of Respiratory Diseases, where he was assigned to study respiratory illnesses which had military significance, and to devise a science and strategy for dealing with influenza. He demonstrated that influenza

A viruses underwent “gradual and progressive minor antigenic characteristics called ‘drift and shift,’ which are the basis of modern influenza vaccine strategies” (Olanski, Lancet 2005).

In 1957, at age 38, Hilleman was recruited by the pharmaceutical company Merck & Company at West Point, Pennsylvania, to lead its virus and vaccination research programs for the next 47 years, continuing to direct the Merck Institute for Vaccinology for another 20 years – after compulsory retirement from Merck Research Labs in 1984 at age 65 – until his death at age 85.

From the 1950s to the 1990s, Hilleman and his team created more than 40 experimental and licensed human and animal vaccines, including those in use currently offering protection against measles, mumps, chickenpox, rubella, hepatitis A, hepatitis B, pneumococcal pneumonia, meningitis, pandemic influenza, and chlamydia. Hilleman found present in batches of both the Salk and Sabin poliovirus vaccines produced and distributed from 1954 to 1963.

The source was the rhesus and cynomolgous monkey kidney cells used to produce the vaccine. Even more troubling was the observation that SV40 could cause tumors in hamsters. By 1963 screening procedures were instituted to ensure the absence of SV40 in poliovirus vaccines. Ironically, monkey cells were used for poliovirus vaccine production because it was feared that human cells might contain unknown human cancer viruses.

~ The Lancet published July 31, 2004

On any list of medical triumphs of the 20th century, polio vaccination is sure to rate a mention. In the 1950s and early 1960s, the shot and sugar-cube vaccines of Jonas Salk, and later Albert Sabin, offered people the first opportunities to protect themselves from a scourge as feared in its day as AIDS is in our own.

Few back then grasped that these vaccines might also be a huge, inadvertent, uncontrolled experiment in interspecies viral transmission. But from 1955 to 1963, according to a 1976 US National Institutes of Health (NIH)-funded study, 98 million Americans alone probably were exposed to polio vaccines contaminated with SV40 – a monkey virus that can cause cancers in animals. Now, a July 7 report in New Scientist has raised fears that hundreds of millions of eastern Europeans, Asians, and Africans also may have been exposed to SV40 in Soviet-made polio vaccines. Michele Carbone of Loyola University Medical Center, Chicago, USA, announced at the 2004 Vaccine Cell Substrates meeting (Rockville, MD) that the Soviet vaccine could have been contaminated until the 1980s. This is worrying since, despite 44 years of medical debate, epidemiological studies have yet to establish conclusively whether SV40 has or hasn't caused cancers in people.

When Salk developed his vaccine, instead of using human tissues, as did the scientists who won a Nobel Prize for first growing poliovirus in tissue culture, he used minced-up rhesus macaque monkey kidneys, which were remarkably efficient poliovirus factories. Those who sought to supplant Salk's formaldehyde-inactivated vaccine with live, attenuated oral vaccine also used monkey kidney cultures. Despite a manufacturing problem that, at best, left six children who received the vaccine paralysed in the arm, and despite concerns about wild simian viruses, Salk's shots were declared safe and effective after 1954 field trials. The next year, after grudging approval by sceptical government regulators, free Salk shots were made available throughout the USA.

By 1960, scientists and vaccine manufacturers knew that monkey kidneys were sewers of simian viruses. Such contamination often spoiled cultures, including those of an NIH researcher named Bernice Eddy, who worked on vaccine safety. In 1959, fresh from co-reporting that the mouse polyoma virus could cause cancer in other animals, Eddy tested the rhesus monkey kidney substrate used to make polio vaccine. She injected 154 newborn hamsters with extracts of the cell cultures: 109 developed tumors. Next, she ground up three of the tumours and injected the residue into other hamsters. The animals receiving injections from two of the three tumours developed cancers. But when Eddy put the substance back into the monkey cell culture, nothing happened, and she couldn't isolate the suspected virus.

In The Virus and the Vaccine: The True Story of a Cancer-Causing Monkey Virus, Contaminated Polio Vaccine, and the Millions of Americans Exposed, Debbie Bookchin and Jim Schumacher report that in 1960, when Eddy presented her results to her boss, a polio vaccine champion named Joe Smadel, he was livid and disbelieving: "Its implications — that something in the polio vaccine could cause cancer — was an affront to his career." Her discovery also threatened one of the USA's most important public-health programs. "By 1960, tens of millions of Americans had been vaccinated against polio, and it was federal health policy that everyone should be vaccinated and continue to receive Salk booster shots."

Between 1997 and early 2003, say Bookchin and Schumacher, more than 25 published studies found SV40 in human mesotheliomas; 16 others found the virus in brain and bone cancers, lymphomas, and other cancers and in kidneys and peripheral blood. As of 2003, SV40 had been found in human tumours in 18 developed countries. Bookchin and Schumacher claim that the rates of SV40-positive tumours seem highest in countries that used the greatest amount of contaminated Salk polio vaccine, including the UK, USA, and Italy.

As the SV40 story illustrates, until scientists know that a virus exists in cell cultures, they can't create a test to detect it and thus can't eliminate it from vaccines grown on those cultures. Might other potentially dangerous simian viruses lurk in primary monkey kidney cultures used for polio vaccines? Such concerns were relieved in January, 2000, when attenuated oral polio vaccine made since the 1950s by Lederle Laboratories on primary monkey kidney cultures was removed from the US market. Eddy tried to get word out to colleagues but was muzzled and stripped of her vaccine regulatory duties and her laboratory. However, two Merck researchers, Ben Sweet and Maurice Hilleman, soon identified the rhesus virus later named SV40, the carcinogenic agent that had eluded Eddy.

The Salk and Sabin Vaxxine Rollout

In the late 1950s, several different groups of researchers were developing vaccines against polio, which at the time was still epidemic worldwide. One of these vaccines, developed by Hilary Koprowski, MD (1916-2013), was used in trials in Africa, after first being tested in the United States. The vaccine virus was grown in tissue cultures taken from macaque monkeys before being administered to about a million people in Burundi, Rwanda, and what is now the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

There are two types of polio vaccine, both developed during the 1950s. The oral polio vaccine, created by Albert Sabin, uses a live, weakened form of the virus to induce immunity. It is not dangerous to the person who receives it; the virus cannot pass from the patient's gut to their spinal cord, where it could cause paralysis.

But the weakened vaccine virus can acquire mutations that turn it into a live virus. As a result, for a few weeks after someone receives the vaccine, they excrete infectious, vaccine-derived poliovirus. Vaccine-derived poliovirus poses no threat to vaccinated people. But anyone unvaccinated is at risk. The other type of polio vaccine, developed by Jonas Salk, uses an inactivated version of the virus. While that vaccine is safer - a dead virus can't mutate and come back to life - it doesn't provide as robust protection. Because the oral vaccine travels through the gut, it offers local immunity there and prevents the vaccinated person from becoming reinfected. The inactivated vaccine, which is delivered via injection, stimulates an immune response that stops the virus from damaging neurons and causing symptoms but doesn't actually prevent infection.

What Salk and the other pioneers of the polio vaccine found out was that accidents did happen. In the preparation of massive amounts of various polio vaccines - either weakened or killed virus that causes recipients to form protective antibodies - things occasionally went horribly wrong. Hundreds of people actually contracted polio by the very means they sought to protect themselves - and some died. Researchers who cultured the virus using the tissues of animals were stricken and sometimes killed by other viruses infecting the animals. And finally, the medium that scientists used to produce the vaccine - the kidneys of monkeys caught in the wild - was found to be sometimes contaminated by simian viruses that were later passed on to millions of unsuspecting people.

Jonas Salk, backed by a private philanthropy popularly known as the March of Dimes, introduced the first widely used polio vaccine in 1954. His vaccine was a virulent form of the polio virus that had been killed by formaldehyde. This dead, or "inactivated," virus was injected into people to provoke the body's immune system to manufacture disease-fighting antibodies that would repel the wild, paralyzing types of polio. But medical science ultimately rejected Salk's shots as the vaccine of choice in favor of a weakened but still living virus administered by mouth - in Albert Sabin's sugar cube. Unlike the Salk shots, which were believed to require periodic booster vaccinations, the oral polio vaccine conferred lifetime immunity. It could be taken by mouth and required no injections; and the live vaccine silently spread the weakened, non-paralyzing virus even to those who failed to take the oral vaccine. These "susceptibles" would simply catch the weakened virus and get the infection without noticeable symptoms. They also would become immune to paralytic polio.

In April 1955, the results of the largest clinical trial ever held (at that time) were made public. More than 400,000 U.S. children had been immunized with Salk's IPV and, as the results of effective protection against this dreaded disease were declared, Americans breathed a collective sigh of relief. The Salk vaccine was declared 90% effective against Types II and III poliovirus and 60 to 70% effective against Type I. Within 2 hours, Salk's IPV was licensed for use. Thanks to guarantees from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis (now the March of Dimes), industrial production facilities were already built and ready to operate. The goal was to have five million U.S. children vaccinated by July 1955. Across the Atlantic, some European countries imported the Salk vaccine from the United States whereas others, including Denmark, Sweden, and the Netherlands, began vaccine production in their own government facilities.

Many virologists were of the opinion that Salk's vaccine could not provide long-lasting protection and that this could only be achieved with Sabin's live-attenuated version. Only a live vaccine, it was argued, had sufficient immunogenicity to provide protection. In contrast, an inactivated vaccine would have to be re-administered regularly. Undeterred by Salk's popular success, Cox and Koprowski at Lederle (Koprowski later took his candidate vaccine to the Wistar Institute) and Sabin at the University of Cincinnati continued to work on their live-attenuated virus preparations. Trials of their vaccines took place largely outside the United States because widespread immunization with the Salk vaccine meant that most U.S. children had antibody levels that were too high to enable evaluation of a second vaccine. Instead, Koprowski tested his vaccine in Northern Ireland and in (and around) the Congo, Cox in Latin America, and Sabin in the Soviet Union. By July 1960, more than 15 million Soviet citizens were said to have received Sabin's oral vaccine.

On the basis of these trials, Sabin's vaccine was deemed the better of the two. It was found to confer longer-lasting immunity, so that repeated boosters were not necessary, and acted quickly, immunity being achieved in a matter of days. Taken orally (on a sugar cube or in a drink), the vaccine could be administered more readily than the Salk vaccine, which had to be injected.

Most importantly, the Sabin vaccine offered the prospect of passive vaccination because it caused an active infection of the bowel that resulted in the excretion of live-attenuated virus. Thus, through fecal matter and sewage the Sabin vaccine could help to protect those who had not been vaccinated. In August 1960, the U.S. Surgeon General recommended licensing of the Sabin vaccine.

The oral vaccine gradually supplanted its rival and by 1968, Salk's vaccine was no longer being administered in the United States, and U.S. pharmaceutical companies had stopped producing it. This interplay – between emerging consensus on the part of health authorities and physicians, and growing commitment on the part of the manufacturing industry to carry out the consensus—is a good example of technological “lock in,” a theory propounded by evolutionary economists.

As early as 1962, there were growing suspicions that in a very small number of cases, largely adults, the live-attenuated vaccine could lead to paralytic poliomyelitis. In 1964, an advisory committee established by the U.S. Surgeon General reviewed the incidence of the disease between 1955 and 1961 (when only the Salk vaccine was used) and between 1961 and 1964 (when the Sabin vaccine predominated). They concluded that of the 87 cases of paralytic polio reported in the United States since 1961, 57 were judged “compatible” with having been caused by the attenuated poliovirus regaining its virulence. By the mid-1960s, health officials had to weigh the many benefits of the live-attenuated vaccine

And Polio Virus Was/IS AIDS Related !?!

In 1957, when the Congo trials began, most researchers were using rhesus macaques from India. It would be another four years before scientists fully appreciated the danger that macaques, the natural hosts for SV40, were passing along the virus to humans. Once that troubling discovery was made, in 1961, vaccine producers shifted to kidneys from African green monkeys, which in the wild were free of SV40.

Unfortunately, green monkeys were infected with something else. More than two decades later, in 1982 and 1983, veterinarians at the California Primate Research Center and at Harvard’s New England Primate Center observed that large numbers of their macaques were dying periodically of AIDS-like illnesses. These disorders had been killing animals since 1969, but suddenly, the researchers were struck by the similarity to the new disease afflicting American homosexual men. The monkeys’ illnesses, the researchers discovered, were triggered by a previously unrecognized retrovirus called simian immunodeficiency virus (SIV).

Among the natural hosts for this virus were none other than African green monkeys, but in that species, typically, SIV didn’t cause serious disease. SIV turned out to be related to HIV, though it was only about forty percent similar in genetic structure to the chief AIDS-causing human retrovirus, known as HIV-1. Robert Gallo says some versions of this monkey virus are virtually indistinguishable from some human variants of HIV-2, the second virus that causes AIDS in human beings and mainly afflicts western Africa.

No one who was involved with Koprowski’s Congo project and is alive today remembers what kind of monkey kidneys were used in 1957-60. Koprowski is still vigorous and remains at the Wistar Institute, in Philadelphia

- now as an institute professor and until 1991 as the director of the facility, which is housed in a stolid Victorian structure on the campus of the University of Pennsylvania.

Koprowski insists that his associates used kidneys from African green monkeys to make the Congo vaccines. When I express surprise and mention that Salk and Sabin were using rhesus monkeys at that point, he agrees to check. When we speak next, he admits he can't find a single paper describing which species was used to make his vaccine. "

But I have a suspicion the virus was grown in the rhesus monkey at the original beginning," he tells me in his thick Polish accent. "Now when we switched to green monkeys, I have no idea." Thomas Norton, his associate who grew the virus for the vaccine, is now dead, Koprowski says - as are those who worked with Norton to prepare the vaccine. Significantly, the large lots of the vaccine used in the Congo apparently were prepared at the laboratories of the Wistar Institute, he says. Wyeth Laboratories made subsequent preparations, including those used in Poland.

Contamination?

The question of which monkeys were used to make the Congo vaccine may not be crucial. The virus that causes monkey AIDS occurs in several species, though the original hosts - African greens and others - remain healthy even when infected. Monkeys frequently were gang-caged in those days, facilitating the spread of viruses. If a green monkey turned out to have a virus quite similar to HIV-1, it could have infected the other monkeys.

Although most American researchers in this period apparently did use rhesus macaque monkeys from Asia, for a while around the time Koprowski was working with his vaccine, the monkey supply was interrupted. The Indian government- responding to popular alarm among its people about the widespread slaughter of Indian macaques for vaccine production and other research and barred export of rhesus monkeys to the U.S. For a time at least, that ban must have made suppliers scramble to find different markets and alternate monkey species, probably including African monkeys. Moreover, Koprowski says the kidneys used at Wistar were bought already removed from their hosts, meaning that researchers might not have been sure what kind of monkeys they came from, much less what viruses came with them.

According to no less an authority than Albert Sabin himself, at least one other virus did contaminate Koprowski's vaccine used in the Congo. In 1959, Sabin reported in the British Medical Journal that a special test he had devised revealed the presence of an "unidentified" cell-killing virus in "Koprowski's type 1 'Chat' vaccine used in the Belgian Congo trials." More than three decades later, Sabin says he never figured out exactly what the virus was.

Abstract

Although mass vaccination programs have resulted in the eradication of a number of human infectious diseases, vaccine contamination has been a persistent concern. In particular, it is now known that the early polio vaccines were contaminated with at least one monkey virus, SV40. The transfer of monkey viruses to man via contaminated vaccines is particularly relevant to the acquired immunodeficiency syndrome (AIDS), since the causative agent of AIDS, human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), is thought to be derived from a simian precursor virus. Furthermore, human infection with this virus appears to be a relatively recent event. We hypothesize that the AIDS pandemic may have originated with a contaminated polio vaccine that was administered to inhabitants of Equatorial Africa from 1957 to 1959. The mechanism of evolution of HIV from this vaccine remains to be determined.

The Many Symptoms of Post Polio Vaxxine Syndrome

Post-polio syndrome develops in individuals who have survived the polio vaccines of the that impacts motor nerves and disables and degenerates muscle mass at 1% per year after activation. There is no cure and some 200 million were said to have been given the polio vaccine when it was introduced back in the late 1950's with the Salk vaccine and early 1960's when the Sabin polio sugar cube was introduced, especially targeting children.

There is no vaccine or other medication that can prevent post-polio syndrome nor is there a way to predict who will develop it. No one knows who will develop PPS and who will not and does not activate in the individual for 10-60 years after taking the oral or injected Sabin or Salk vaccinations

Post-polio syndrome is not contagious. It is being caused by the cancer causing Simian Monkey virus SV40 that was purposely inserted into the polio vaccines that are activated in the individual decades later by an emotional or physical trauma or event that triggers the latent poison into the body that starts the PPS process.

There is no central system for reporting post-polio syndrome, but it is estimated that 300,000 individuals are survivors of the polio inoculation in the United States with numbers increasing exponentially, yet due to under reporting and in testing exact figures are hard to come by.

The history of PPS vaccine includes a new onset of slowly progressive muscle weakness, decreased endurance, muscle atrophy, muscle and/or joint pain and fatigue. Typically, later developing symptoms include breathing or swallowing issues. Onset of PPSvx is gradual but can be activated from trauma or surgery can make the symptoms appear suddenly. These include issues with depression which affect activity levels or functional issues such as joint pain from use of braces or crutches.

Another irony of it all is that the same promoters, "The March of Dimes" that promoted the deadly, still killing vaccines, are reporting these stats below. I can attest to every of the symptoms acutely as well as the degenerative, debilitating effects on my muscles, my throat, my chill attacks, fatigue, exhaustion, loss of muscle and ability to build muscle, both dropped feet, (started as one first, then the other 4 years later, now I scoot around in a power chair to help get around.

NO ONE, has a cure for this and I have gone to some of the most brilliant homepaths, and MD's, and many other, including my own Bioomagnetic healing, as well as many, many other kind souls, doing sessions for me as well...but still it goes on..as many are finding out as well now.

What Causes PPS?

"The causes of PPS are not thoroughly understood," says Lewis P. Rowland, M.D., professor of neurology at Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City and chairman of the March of Dimes Steering Committee on Post-Polio Syndrome. "In the initial acute polio episode, patients can lose up to 60 or 70 percent of their motor nerve cells. The surviving nerve cells find muscle fibers that still work and attach to them, restoring function. After 15 to 40 years,” Dr. Rowland says, “the ability to maintain function seems to be lost, but no one is certain why this happens.”

AFTER EFFECTS OF POLIO CAN HARM SURVIVORS 40 YEARS LATER Few Doctors Recognize Little-Known Condition

White Plains, New York | Monday, June 25, 2001

Up to 20 million polio survivors around the world face the threat of new disabilities 15 to 40 years after their original illness, which could leave them using wheelchairs or ventilators for the rest of their lives, says a new report from the March of Dimes.

A major problem confronting millions of polio survivors is that too few doctors, in both industrial and developing countries, recognize this slow moving and little understood secondary illness, called post-polio syndrome (PPS). The main symptoms of PPS are new progressive muscle weakness that gradually worsens, together with severe fatigue and pain in muscles and joints. It is often accompanied by decreased muscle endurance during activities.

gradually worsens, together with severe fatigue and pain in muscles and joints. It is often accompanied by decreased muscle endurance during activities.

No cure exists for PPS. Doctors advise patients to curtail physical activities and take rest periods during the day, including during working hours. Many doctors also advise more severely affected patients to use wheelchairs part-time or full-time, even if they can walk without them.

As many as 40 percent of polio survivors may get PPS, according to some estimates. The March of Dimes, a nonprofit agency founded by U.S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was a polio survivor, now is alerting medical systems around the world to PPS with its new report, Post-Polio Syndrome: Identifying Best Practices in Diagnosis and Care. It is also releasing a second report to assist people with PPS: Guidelines for People Who Have Had Polio.

As many as 250,000 U.S. polio survivors may have PPS, the March of Dimes says. Some 40,000 polio survivors have PPS in Germany, 30,000 in Japan, 24,000 in France, 16,000 in Australia, 12,000 in Canada and 12,000 in the United Kingdom, according to local polio support groups and doctors. The World Health Organization estimates that 10 to 20 million polio survivors are alive worldwide, and some estimates suggest that 4 to 8 million of them may get PPS.

Post-Polio Syndrome

What research is being done?

Scientists are working on a variety of investigations that may one day help individuals with PPS. Some basic researchers are studying the behavior of motor neurons many years after a polio attack. Others are looking at the mechanisms of fatigue and are trying to discover the roles played by the brain, spinal cord, peripheral nerves, neuromuscular junction (the site where a nerve cell meets the muscle cell it helps activate), and muscles.

Symptoms and Risk Factors of Post-Polio Syndrome

Post-polio syndrome tends to develop slowly with alternating periods of stability followed by increasing symptoms. The development of PPS occurs over time.

PPS occurs in individuals with a history of polio that included motor nerve involvement. It is typically not life-threatening unless breathing is affected and untreated. Individuals differ in amount of affected function. Some will have mild cases of PPS with minor adaptations while others will have more significant issues requiring changes in lifestyle.

Symptoms include some or all of these factors:

- progressive weakness in muscles and joints
- pain in muscles and joints
- body/mind fatigue and exhaustion with minimal activity
- loss of appetite
- fever
- muscle atrophy (wasting)
- bone distortions such as scoliosis (curving of the spine)
- breathing issues
- sleep disorders, insomnia, sleep apnea

- swallowing issues
- cold temperature intolerance, occasionally intolerance to heat

Risk Factors for Post-Polio Syndrome

Risk factors for PPS include a higher incidence in those individuals who had a severe initial course of polio with motor nerve involvement. If recovery of function was good or excellent from the initial polio event, more stress is placed on the supplementing nerves which can lead to post-polio syndrome motor nerve failure. Development of polio later in life as a teen or adult can relate to a higher risk of PPS because the sprouting nerve terminals are slower to develop as individuals age. Overexercising to the point of muscle fatigue can be a trigger for PPS if you have a history of polio with motor nerve involvement.

Complications of Post-Polio Syndrome

Issues that result from PPS depend on location of injury to the nerve such as in the spinal cord, in the body or both. Complications arise as weakness progresses. These are some of the key issues.

1. Falls: muscle weakness can lead to balance problems, slipping or getting your toe caught under a rug or stair step. Falls can have profound consequences such as pulled muscles, bruising, and broken bones.
2. Difficulty swallowing: individuals with PPS that affects oral motor activity such as chewing and swallowing can lead to nutritional issues and dehydration. Poor oral motor control can lead to pneumonia if food is misdirected into the lungs.
3. Breathing: issues arise due to weak chest and abdominal muscles. This can reduce the ability to produce a strong cough to clear airway passages which can lead to pneumonia. Muscular changes can lead to breathing issues such as sleep apnea or chronic respiratory failure.
4. Muscle and skeletal structure: changes from strong muscles pulling the body against weaker muscles can result in structural bone changes leading difficulty in body positioning, discomfort, pain, contractures, difficulty in hygiene. Muscular changes can lead to breathing issues such as sleep apnea or chronic respiratory failure as well as pressure injury. Scoliosis, a change in the structural positioning of the spine affects the body's ability to inhale deeply and effectively.
5. Neurogenic bowel and bladder: nerve miscommunications change your ability to toilet. Bowel and bladder programs can be established to keep your body healthy. These programs reduce complications and maintain continence if elimination is challenged.

6. Bone mineral density: reductions from skeletal changes or inactivity can create osteopenia (low bone mass) or osteoporosis (extremely low bone mass).
7. Assistive device: issues such as braces and splints rubbing on the skin or use of crutches can lead to pressure injury and joint pain.

Chapter 3

The Great Switcheroo ~ DDT Caused Polio

DDT was a neurotoxin that accumulated in body fat. By then, the chemical could be found in the bloodstream of nearly every American.

“It was even known by 1945 that DDT is stored in the body fat of mammals and appears in the milk. With this foreknowledge the series of catastrophic events that followed the most intensive campaign of mass poisoning in known human history, should not have surprised the experts. Yet, far from admitting a causal relationship so obvious that in any other field of biology it would be instantly accepted, virtually the entire apparatus of communication, lay and scientific alike, has been devoted to denying, concealing, suppressing, distorting and attempts to convert into its opposite, the overwhelming evidence. Libel, slander and economic boycott have not been overlooked in this campaign.”

~ Dr. Morton Biskind

Once the government found that DDT was causing paralysis they began greatly reducing DDT on farms knowing that the outbreak would be abated so they brought in Albert Sabin and Jonas Salk to promote the new polio vaccine that would show that the reduction of poliomyelitis, as it was termed, was eventually eradicated due to getting the vaccine. Big pHARMA and the government KNEW that by people would get better when the DDT was abated, so the polio vaccine was then created.

Several books and many scientific studies have no proven without doubt that in the 1950's the polio outbreak was caused by the massive use of DDT, a neurological toxin that was said to infect and be in the bloodstream of everyone in the United States.

The American public first heard about DDT in early 1944, when newspapers across the country reported that typhus, “the dreaded plague that has followed in the wake of every great war in history,” was no longer a threat to American troops and their allies thanks to the army’s new “louse-killing” powder. In an experiment in Naples, Italy, American soldiers dusted more than a million Italians with DDT, killing the body lice that spread typhus and saving the city from a devastating epidemic. It was a dramatic debut.

DDT quickly began to work its magic on the home front, as well. In the seasons that followed, newspapers reported that in test applications across the United States the pesticide was killing malaria-carrying mosquitoes throughout the South and preserving Arizona vineyards, West Virginia orchards, Oregon potato fields, Illinois cornfields, and Iowa dairies—and even a historic Massachusetts stagecoach with moth-infested upholstery. A peacetime vision for DDT bloomed: here was a wartime discovery that would prevent human disease and protect victory gardens, commercial crops, and livestock from infestations as it turned schools, restaurants, hotels, and homes into more comfortable, pest-free places for people and their pets. DDT was a poison, but it was safe enough for war. Any person harmed by DDT would be an accepted casualty of combat.

What kind of harm? The problem was that no one really knew. Testing at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and at the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) had shown that in lab animals DDT could cause tremors, liver damage, and death. Of the variety of animals tested in 1943 and 1944, monkeys seemed most resistant to DDT’s effects, mice the least. DDT suspended in oil proved more toxic than DDT dust, and the liquids DDT was dissolved in (like kerosene) often seemed more toxic than DDT itself. What was worrisome, according to FDA pharmacologist Herbert O. Calvery, was that the amount of DDT it took to produce symptoms of toxicity had no clear correlation across species; in some species it took very little, while in others it took a lot. The problem was complicated even further by the fact that when small animals ate small amounts of DDT over time, they developed poisoning symptoms normally associated with a single, large dose.

Calvery’s concerns appeared at the very end of a long, “restricted” report on insecticides issued by the Office of Scientific Research and Development in 1944. A War Department bulletin released the same month warned against spraying DDT on cattle, fowl, and fish and on waters that might be used for human consumption. It also cautioned soldiers against getting DDT-infused oil on their skin or DDT dust in their lungs, and strongly urged them not to let the pesticide “mingle” with kitchen supplies. At the same time, the insecticide in every recruit’s aerosol bomb was swapped out for DDT, and soldiers were instructed to spray or dust their mattresses and mess halls, latrines and barracks, dugouts, infirmaries, and even their uniforms. The warnings and cautions attached to army memos about DDT did yield some measures of self-protection: soldiers charged with DDT detail were given the protective gear Materi later saw on the team that entered her home. DDT was a poison, but it was safe enough for war. Any person harmed by DDT would be an accepted casualty of combat.

DDT was released for public sale in late 1945, at a time when insecticides were commonly known as “poisons” (or by professionals as “economic poisons” for their ability to preserve agricultural profits). Insecticides introduced in the latter half of the 19th century for commercial agriculture often contained copper, lead, and arsenic, and by the first half of the 20th century it was well known that insecticide residues on fruits and vegetables could sicken and even kill hapless consumers. This reputation was regularly reinforced by publicized cases of poisoning: Illinois women sickened by sprayed asparagus; the Montana girl poisoned by sprayed fruit; poisonings in Los Angeles traced back to excessive residues of arsenic on cabbage, pears, spinach, broccoli, and celery. There were also the tragic accidents associated with the increased presence of pest poisons in everyday life, such as the death of 47 patients at an Oregon hospital where roach powder was confused for powdered milk.

Instead of distancing themselves from poison sprays, however, by World War II more and more American consumers were bringing them home from the corner store. As Americans planted victory gardens to grow their own food, they amassed household-sized collections of agricultural poisons, including lead arsenate, calcium arsenate, nicotine sulfate, bichloride of mercury, and Bordeaux powder, a mixture of copper sulfate and lime. "Every gardener with more than a month's experience," noted a magazine writer in the spring of 1945, now has "a combination of powders and solutions as lethal as an arsenal."

When the pesticide was first released for sale, state officials in Missouri issued a formal warning against it, citing unknown hazards to plants, animals, and humans. Minnesota banned its sale, New Jersey restricted it, and California and New York issued decrees requiring that DDT-containing products bear the skull and crossbones indicating a dangerous poison. Such expert worries were no secret. Newspapers far and wide reported that the new chemical was a threat to nature. (Older agricultural chemicals, such as lead and arsenic, typically got press space only when they poisoned people.) DDT killed off beneficial bugs and had the potential to "eliminate ducks and geese," "paralyze" sheep, "burn" plants, and spark population explosions of some pests by wiping out their natural predators.

In the spring of 1949 headlines across the country carried the news that DDT had found its way into the nation's dairy supply and that the "slow, insidious poison" was building up in human bodies. The following year, and for the rest of the 1950s, DDT became a focus of congressional hearings about the safety of the food supply. FDA scientist Arnold J. Lehman testified that small amounts of DDT were being stored in human fat and accumulating over time and that, unlike with the older poisons, no one knew what the consequences would be.

The preceding charts above clearly shows the timeline as to when DDT was reduced and the polio vaccine was introduced beginning in 1954.

After 1950, DDT was continually incriminated until its registration cancellation in 1968 and ban in 1972. So 1950 marked a point of increased public awareness, changes in legislation and policy, voluntary phaseout, labeling requirements and discouragement from use in dairy farms. Much of the usage in the US may have moved over to forestry applications, placing less DDT directly into the food chain. Dairy products are ideal pesticide carriers because they are emulsions of fats and water. DDT is a waxy organochlorine with an affinity for fats, and is efficiently carried by dairy products through the digestive tract into the organs. In the mid-1940s the FDA advised against the use of DDT, especially on dairy farms. However, the pressure of the industry to promote DDT was overwhelming and the FDA's advice went unheeded.

Years later, the compelling nature of the evidence ensured the passage of stronger labeling laws and restrictions from use on dairy farms. In the early 1950s, scientists at the US Department of Agriculture found that although fodder treated with DDT caused no damage to the cows eating it, the health of their calves was severely impaired, sometimes with fatal results. The DDT was passed along from cow to calf via the milk (Van Nostrand's Encyclopedia of Science and Engineering, Van Nostrand Reinhold 1995, v 5, p1775). DDT is a neurotoxin and the calves developed something very much like infantile poliomyelitis. Calves weren't the only infants drinking cow milk during the early 1950s.

"To anyone with even a rudimentary knowledge of toxicology, it exceeds all limits of credibility that a compound lethal for insects, fish, birds, chickens, rats, cattle, and monkey would be nontoxic for human beings." ~ Dr. Morton Biskind

In 1953, Dr. Morton S. Biskind wrote that the United States had just endured its greatest polio epidemic. The entire public was steeped in dramatic images—a predatory poliovirus, nearly a million dead and paralyzed children, iron lungs, struggling doctors and dedicated nurses. The late president Franklin

An airplane spraying DDT over Baker County, Oregon as part of a spruce budworm control project, 1955

D. Roosevelt had been memorialized as a polio victim who was infected with the deadly polio-virus. The media was saturated with positive images of scientific progress and the marvels of DDT to kill disease-carrying mosquitos. Jonas Salk was in the wings, preparing to be moved center stage. By October, 1955, Biskind, whose works had been published in established medical journals and who testified before the Senate on the dangers of pesticides, was forced to self-publish his writings and was labeled a “heretic” by his professional peers. Dr. Biskind had the composure to argue what he thought was the most obvious explanation for the polio epidemic: Central nervous system diseases (CNS) such as polio are actually the physiological and symptomatic manifestations of the ongoing government and industry sponsored inundation of the world’s populace with central nervous system poisons.

“In 1945, against the advice of investigators who had studied the pharmacology of the compound and found it dangerous for all forms of life, DDT (chlorophenoethane, dichloro-diphenyl-trichloroethane) was released in the United States and other countries for general use by the public as an insecticide. Since the last war there have been a number of curious changes in the incidence of certain ailments and the development of new syndromes never before observed. A most significant feature of this situation is that both man and all his domestic animals have simultaneously been affected. In man, the incidence of poliomyelitis has risen sharply.

Early in 1949, as a result of studies during the previous year, the author published reports implicating DDT preparations in the syndrome widely attributed to a ‘virus-X’ in man, in ‘X-disease’ in cattle and in often fatal syndromes in dogs and cats. The relationship was promptly denied by government officials, who provided no evidence to contest the author’s observations but relied solely on the prestige of government authority and sheer numbers of experts to bolster their position. We have described the syndrome as follows: In acute exacerbations, mild clonic convulsions involving mainly the legs, have been observed. Several young children exposed to DDT developed a limp lasting from 2 or 3 days to a week or more. Simultaneously with the occurrence of this disorder [X-disease], a number of related changes occurred in the incidence of known diseases. The most striking of these is poliomyelitis. In the United States the incidence of polio had been increasing prior to 1945 at a fairly constant rate, but its epidemiologic characteristics remained unchanged. Beginning in 1946, the rate of increase more than doubled. Since then remarkable changes in the character of the disease have been noted. Contrary to all past experience, the disease has remained epidemic year after year.”

Like many stories of American innovation in the second half of the 20th century, DDT’s ascent can be traced to World War II, when it was successfully used to combat malaria-infected mosquitoes in the South Pacific. In peacetime, the production and application of DDT continued. Plywood and wallpaper were coated with DDT in suburban homes. Farmers applied it to cows and crops. Trucks drove around cities spraying it to ward off insects. Conis points out that the chemical was of such little concern at the time that children would play in its mist. “In just a few short years, the pesticide — a relatively simple compound of carbon, hydrogen, and chlorine, used with abandon — had come to symbolize our postwar nation’s capacity to vanquish age-old scourges with modern science and technology,” she writes.

But DDT’s status as a miracle chemical wouldn’t last. When it became a part of everyday American life, there was still little understanding of how it worked. (In fact, the chemist who originally convinced the U.S. government to deploy the pesticide did so by eating a chunk of it in front of the surgeon general.) Later, scientists would discover DDT was a neurotoxin that accumulated in body fat. By then, the chemical could be found in the bloodstream of nearly every American.

By October 1945, DDT was available for public sale in the United States. Opposition to DDT was focused by the 1962 publication of Rachel Carson’s book Silent Spring. It talked about environmental impacts that correlated with the widespread use of DDT in agriculture in the United States, and it questioned the logic of broadcasting potentially dangerous chemicals into the environment with little prior investigation of their environmental and health effects. The book cited claims that DDT and other pesticides caused cancer and that their agricultural use was a threat to wildlife, particularly birds. Although Carson never directly called for an outright ban on the use of DDT, its publication was a seminal event for the environmental movement and resulted in a large public outcry that eventually led, in 1972, to a ban on DDT’s agricultural use in the United States.

Along with the passage of the Endangered Species Act, the United States ban on DDT is a major factor in the comeback of the bald eagle and the peregrine falcon from near-extinction in the contiguous United States. From 1950 to 1980, DDT was extensively used in agriculture- more than 40,000 tonnes each year worldwide and it has been estimated that a total of 1.8 million tonnes have been produced globally since the 1940s. In the United States, it was manufactured by some 15 companies, including Monsanto, Ciba, Montrose Chemical Company, Pennwalt, and Velsicol Chemical Corporation. Production peaked in 1963 at 82,000 tons per year.

The World Health Organization directs both DDT application (for mosquito control) and polio vaccination worldwide. In 1988, the World Health Assembly adopted a resolution for the worldwide eradication of polio, spearheaded by national governments, WHO, Rotary International, the US Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), UNICEF, and later joined by the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation and Gavi, the Vaccine Alliance.

"DDT is good for me-e-e!"

The great expectations held for DDT have been realized. During 1946, exhaustive scientific tests have shown that, when properly used, DDT kills a host of obstructive insect pests, and is a benefactor of all humanity.

Just like they now blame “flu season” at the onset of winter, polio outbreaks occurred most often during the summer and were blamed on viruses picked up in swimming pools. But summer was the time when DDT spraying was at its peak and exposure would have been greatest, either directly or through foods from animals eating sprayed crops. Summer foods like ice cream from DDT-sprayed dairy cows would have been a likely source. In developing countries, polio is blamed on poor sanitation. But in the United States, polio was blamed on lack of immunity due to good sanitation!

Until the advent of AIDS, polio was the only disease whose cause was enshrined in legislation. US public health law stated that poliomyelitis was an “infectious contagious disease,” yet proof of poliovirus causation is astoundingly weak, and the obvious toxicology was entirely avoided.

The man most responsible for the view that poliomyelitis was contagious was Dr. Simon Flexner, author of the famous (or infamous) Flexner Report, which led the way to the closing of the naturopathic and homeopathic colleges in the United States. Said Flexner: “It was not easy to establish in an individual case precisely how the disease was acquired; it was difficult to bring evidence that was not at all convincing that this disease was contagious.” In discussing Flexner’s report, L. Emmett Holt stated: “Even five years ago, if anyone had suggested that the disease under discussion was an infectious or contagious one, it would have been looked upon as a joke (Scobey, Archives of Pediatrics, May 1951). In 1953, Dr. Kumm was appointed Director of Research of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis (NFIP). The NFIP was funded by its “March of Dimes” program, and it sponsored the hasty development of the Salk vaccine in the early 1950s, at the height of the DDT/polio controversy. Dr. Kumm also “served as a civilian consultant to the Surgeon General . directing field studies of the use of DDT. .” (American Journal of Digestive Diseases , 1953 20:330).

In 1945, DDT was made available to farmers as an agricultural insecticide and played a role in the temporary elimination of malaria in Europe and North America. Despite concerns emerging in the scientific community, and lack of research, the FDA considered it safe up to 7 parts per million in food. There was a large economic incentive to push DDT into the market and sell it to farmers, governments, and individuals to control diseases and increase food production. DDT was also a way for American influence to reach abroad through DDT-spraying campaigns. In the 1944 issue of Life magazine there was a feature regarding the Italian program showing pictures of American public health officials in uniforms spraying DDT on Italian families.

In the 1950s the federal government began tightening regulations governing its use. In 1957 The New York Times reported an unsuccessful struggle to restrict DDT use in Nassau County, New York, and the issue came to the attention of the popular naturalist-author Rachel Carson. William Shawn, editor of

Spreading DDT by Helicopter at a Lakefront Resort in Old Forge, NY during Mosquito Season, LIFE Magazine, July 19, 1948

The New Yorker, urged her to write a piece on the subject, which developed into her 1962 book Silent Spring. The book argued that pesticides, including DDT, were poisoning both wildlife and the environment and were endangering human health. Silent Spring was a best seller, and public reaction to it launched the modern environmental movement in the United States. The year after it appeared, President John F. Kennedy ordered his Science Advisory Committee to investigate Carson's claims. The committee's report "add[ed] up to a fairly thorough-going vindication of Rachel Carson's Silent Spring thesis", in the words of the journal Science, and recommended a phaseout of "persistent toxic pesticides". In 1965, the U.S. military removed DDT from the military supply system due in part to the development of resistance by body lice to DDT; it was replaced by lindane.

In the 1970s and 1980s, agricultural use was banned in most developed countries, beginning with Hungary in 1968, although in practice it continued to be used through at least 1970. This was followed by Norway and Sweden in 1970, West Germany and the United States in 1972, but not in the United Kingdom until 1984. By 1991, total bans, including for disease control, were in place in at least 26 countries; for example, Cuba in 1970, the US in the 1980s, Singapore in 1984, Chile in 1985, and the Republic of Korea in 1986.

People were consuming the chemical in their food. Even before it became a commonly used insecticide, FDA scientists knew that cows treated with DDT would produce milk and meat laced with the chemical. Still, it was used liberally within agriculture, as were hundreds of other new chemical insecticides made available following the war. Meanwhile, chemical corporations banded together to create a public relations campaign affirming the necessity and safety of pesticides like DDT. By the middle of the decade, hundreds of millions of pounds of synthetic pesticides were annually produced, sprayed on vast tracts of American farmland. "The U.S. was also applying pesticides abroad, too," Conis writes, "its DDT the cornerstone of the World Health Organization's malaria-eradication campaign. Pesticides had never been produced or used on such a scale." Meanwhile, chemical corporations banded together to create a public relations campaign affirming the necessity and safety of pesticides like DDT. By the middle of the decade, hundreds of millions of pounds of synthetic pesticides were annually produced, sprayed on vast tracts of American farmland.

California farm laborers were made sick by the uncontrolled use of pesticides and how the fish in a creek that ran near a predominantly Black Alabama town were contaminated. Rachel Carson wrote about the scary tendency for DDT to impact women and their children, as exposure to the pesticide can occur through breastfeeding as well as in-utero.

Big tobacco becomes a major piece of the story halfway through her book. In 1964, a landmark surgeon general report determined that smoking significantly increased a person's risk of lung cancer and death. Tobacco's relationship with DDT stretched back to the 1940s when the chemical was sprayed on fields and in warehouses where tobacco was stored. It was in both cigarettes and their smoke. Thus, the tobacco industry came up with a plan: Blame cancer on the pesticide and then commit to discontinuing its use.

The Stockholm Convention on Persistent Organic Pollutants, which took effect in 2004, put a global ban on several persistent organic pollutants, and restricted DDT use to vector control. The convention was ratified by more than 170 countries. Because of its lipophilic properties, DDT can bioaccumulate, especially in predatory birds. DDT is toxic to a wide range of living organisms, including marine animals such as crayfish, daphnids, sea shrimp and many species of fish. DDT, magnifies through the food chain, with apex predators such as raptor birds concentrating more chemicals than other animals in the same environment. They are stored mainly in body fat. DDT and DDE are resistant to metabolism; in humans, their half-lives are 6 and up to 10 years, respectively. In the United States, these chemicals were detected in almost all human blood samples tested by the Centers for Disease Control . DDT is an endocrine disruptor. It is considered likely to be a human carcinogen .

- Indirect exposure of mothers through workers directly in contact with DDT is associated with an increase in spontaneous abortions.
- Other studies found that DDT or DDE interfere with proper thyroid function in pregnancy and childhood.
- Mothers with high levels of DDT circulating in their blood during pregnancy were found to be more likely to give birth to children who would go on to develop autism.

In 2015, the International Agency for Research on Cancer classified DDT as Group 2A "probably carcinogenic to humans". Previous assessments by the U.S. National Toxicology Program classified it as "reasonably anticipated to be a carcinogen" and by the EPA classified DDT, DDE and DDD as class

B2 “probable” carcinogens; these evaluations were based mainly on animal studies. A 2005 Lancet review stated that occupational DDT exposure was associated with increased pancreatic cancer risk in 2 case control studies. A 2007 case-control study using archived blood samples found that breast cancer risk was increased 5-fold among women who were born prior to 1931 and who had high serum DDT levels in 1963. Reasoning that DDT use became widespread in 1945 and peaked around 1950, they concluded that the ages of 14–20 were a critical period in which DDT exposure leads to increased risk. Most studies of DDT’s human health effects have been conducted in developed countries where DDT is not used and exposure is relatively low.

Illegal diversion to agriculture is also a concern as it is difficult to prevent and its subsequent use on crops is uncontrolled. For example, DDT use is widespread in Indian agriculture, particularly mango production and is reportedly used by librarians to protect books. Other examples include Ethiopia, where DDT intended for malaria control is reportedly used in coffee production, and Ghana where it is used for fishing. The residues in crops at levels unacceptable for export have been an important factor in bans in several tropical countries.

The overarching message is easily understood: “Seventy-five years after scientists first warned of its hazards, 60 years after Rachel Carson wrote ‘Silent Spring,’ and 50 years after it was banned, DDT is still here.” According to a new study published this week in the Journal of the National Cancer Institute, women exposed to the pesticide DDT are still at risk for developing breast cancer four decades later. The findings are based on a 50-year longitudinal cohort of over 15,000 pregnant women, many of whom had been exposed to the pesticide before it was banned in the 1970s. It found that participants who came in contact with high levels of DDT in their youth have an increased risk of breast cancer through the age 54 even 40 years after encountering the chemical.

“There are living people who were exposed sometime in their life and who thank goodness aren’t sick yet, and might someday be sick — and it could be related to their exposure [to DDT],” Director of Child Health and Development Studies at Public Health Institute and lead author of the study, Barbara Cohn, told Grist. “We have to continue this research to understand causes of breast cancer that are broader than just genetics and broader than behaviors that people can control themselves.”

Karuna Jaggar, executive director of the organization Breast Cancer Action says the study is an important reminder that breast cancer risk goes beyond individual choice. "I'm angry that the cancer industry puts all this attention on life style and essentially a shame-and-blame game for women when the reality is that all of us are exposed to DDT and other chemicals that increase our risk of breast cancer," she said to Grist. "The really important lesson about this study is not just that DDT is bad, but that how we regulate chemicals is completely broken."

And because DDT can have such long-term effects on women and their children, we'll continue to see its effects in future generations. Previous studies based on this cohort found that when women were pregnant with a female fetus and exposed to DDT, that daughter was four times more likely to develop breast cancer before the age of 50. The large scientific consensus is that a woman is born with all the eggs she will ever have, so the egg that developed into each of us was most likely formed in our grandmother's womb. Toxins affecting a pregnant woman could have implications for all three generations. In contemporary Britain, a farmer turned scientist, Mark Purdey, has found substantial evidence that mad cow disease, a form of polio-like encephalitis, was caused by a government mandated cattle treatment consisting of organophosphate pesticide and a compound similar to thalidomide.

BHC (benzene hexachloride), a persistent, organochlorine pesticide, is several times more lethal than DDT, in terms of LD50 (lethal dosage required to kill 50 percent of a test population).

As shown in the graph below, BHC was produced in 1945-1954 at quantities similar to DDT. In spite of BHC's lethal quality, it has received much less publicity than DDT. While DDT was banned for such things as an association with the thinning of eagles' eggs, BHC was phased out of production because it was found, after 15 years, to impart a bad taste to food. It is still used in developing nations. One is tempted to ask whether the more controversial DDT, known to be dangerous, was "fronting" for the more dangerous BHC? BHC's correlation with polio incidence is astonishing.

These deadly and paralyzing man made chemicals persist in the environment as neurotoxins that cause polio-like symptoms, polio like physiology, and were dumped onto and into human food at dosage levels far above that approved by the FDA. They directly correlate with the incidence of various neurological diseases called "polio" before 1965. They were utilized, according to Biskind, in the "most intensive campaign of mass poisoning in known human history".

WHILE the world understandably focuses on AIDS in Africa, malaria continues to devastate the children of that blighted continent. Dr Wenceslaus Kilama, a Tanzanian malaria specialist and head of the Malaria Vaccine Initiative, alarmingly explains that every 30 seconds a child in Africa dies from the disease. 'That's like loading up seven Boeing 747s with children and crashing them into the ground every day ... a September 11th every 36 hours', he says.

The Deadly Cutter and Wyeth Polio Vaxxine “Incidents”

In those days, polio, or infantile paralysis, was a terror. “A national poll ... found that polio was second only to the atomic bomb as the thing that Americans feared most,” Offit wrote. “People weren’t sure how you got it,” he said in an interview last week. “Therefore, they were scared of everything. They didn’t want to buy a piece of fruit at the grocery store. It’s the same now. ... Everybody’s walking around with gloves on, with masks on, scared to shake anybody’s hand.”

The Cutter Incident: How America's First Polio Vaccine Led to a Growing Vaccine Crisis

Reviewed by Michael Fitzpatrick

In April 1955 more than 200 000 children in five Western and mid-Western USA states received a polio vaccine in which the process of inactivating the live virus proved to be defective. Within days there were reports of paralysis and within a month the first mass vaccination programme against polio had to be abandoned. Subsequent investigations revealed that the vaccine, manufactured by the California-based family firm of Cutter Laboratories, had caused 40 000 cases of polio, leaving 200 children with varying degrees of paralysis and killing 10.

Paul Offit, paediatrician and prominent advocate of vaccination, sets the ‘Cutter incident’ in the context of the struggle of medical science against polio and other infectious diseases over the course of the 20th century. He reminds us that, within a decade of Karl Landsteiner’s identification of the polio virus in 1908, an epidemic in New York killed 2400 people (mostly children) and left thousands more with a life-long disability. In the 1950s, summer outbreaks in the USA caused tens of thousands of cases, leaving hundreds paralysed or dead. ‘Second only to the atomic bomb’, polio was ‘the thing that Americans feared the most’.

Offit provides a gripping account of how the ‘March of Dimes’, inspired in part by President Franklin D Roosevelt’s personal experience of polio, raised funds for research and focused national attention on the disease. He profiles leading figures, notably Jonas Salk and Albert Sabin —brilliant, egotistical and flawed characters—pioneers in vaccine development and as scientific celebrities, and notorious for their bitter personal rivalry.

On Aug. 30, 1954, Bernice E. Eddy, a veteran scientist at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., was checking a batch of a new polio vaccine for safety. Created by Jonas Salk, the vaccine was hailed as the miracle drug that would conquer the dreaded illness that killed and paralyzed children. Eddy's job was to examine samples submitted by the companies planning to make it. As she checked a sample from Cutter Laboratories in Berkeley, Calif., she noticed that the vaccine designed to protect against the disease had instead given polio to a test monkey. Rather than containing killed virus to create immunity, the sample from Cutter contained live, infectious virus. Something was wrong. "There's going to be a disaster," she told a friend.

Despite Eddy's warnings, an estimated 120,000 children that year were injected with the Cutter vaccine, according to Paul A. Offit, director of the Vaccine Education Center at Children's Hospital of Philadelphia. Roughly 40,000 got "abortive" polio, with fever, sore throat, headache, vomiting and muscle pain. Fifty-one were paralyzed, and five died.

Salk's vaccine was given to 420,000 children. A placebo was given to 200,000. And 1.2 million were given nothing. The study found that children who did not get the vaccine were three times more likely to be paralyzed with polio than those who received the vaccine. A year later, on April 12, 1955, when officials announced the results at a news conference at the University of Michigan, there was jubilation. Reporters hollered: "It works! It works!" Offit wrote.

The news made front-page headlines across the country. "People wept," Offit said. "There were parades in Jonas Salk's honor. ... That's what contributed to the tragedy of Cutter more than anything else ... the irony." That same day, licenses were hurriedly granted to several drug companies, including Cutter Laboratories, to make the vaccine. But the officials granting the licenses were never told of Eddy's findings, Offit wrote. "This was a product that had never been made before, and they were going to use it right away," Eddy had said. She began testing Cutter's samples in August 1954 and continued through November, according to a later report in the Congressional Record. She found that three of the six samples paralyzed test monkeys.

"What do you think is wrong with these monkeys?" she asked a colleague, Offit recounted.

"They were given polio," the colleague replied.

"No," Eddy said. "They were given the ... vaccine."

Eddy's discovery suggested that Cutter's manufacturing process was flawed. Its vaccine should have contained only killed virus. She reported her findings to William Workman, head of the NIH Laboratory of Biologics Control. But amid the scientific and bureaucratic chaos, Workman never told the licensing committee, Offit wrote. Starting on the evening of April 12, 1955, batches of the Salk vaccine made by five drug firms were shipped out in boxes marked "POLIO VACCINE: RUSH." About 165,000 doses of Cutter's went out. Within weeks, reports of mysterious polio infections started coming in.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—The Salk polio vaccine is safe, effective and potent, it was officially announced today.
The vaccine was found 80 to 90 per cent effective in preventing paralytic polio in tests last year, anxious parents were told today by Dr. Thomas Francis Jr. of the University of Michigan.
Dr. Francis said the vaccine is potentially almost 100 per cent effective and can bring complete triumph over the disease, he said.
Dr. Francis' official report declared the vaccine had produced an "exceptionally successful effect" among thousands of children with bulbar polio, by due to some had to invent the most dangerous type, bulbar polio.
There is no doubt that children now can be vaccinated last year to give a booster shot to one on the vaccine.

He urged parents not to rush to doctor offices for shots for themselves because most adults probably already are immune from the disease.
He also urged priority for children.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., April 12.—The world learned today that its hopes for finding an effective weapon against paralytic polio had been realized.

On April 27, 7-year-old Susan Pierce, of Pocatello, Idaho, died of polio days after getting the Cutter vaccine. She had been placed in an iron lung just before she died. Her brother Kenneth had been vaccinated at the same time, but he was okay. Other cases followed. Alton Ochsner, a professor of surgery at Tulane Medical School and founder of the Ochsner Clinic in New Orleans, gave the vaccine to his grandson Eugene Davis, Offit wrote. The child died May 4. Not only did some people injected with the tainted vaccine get sick, but some who got the vaccine went on to infect family members and neighbors. The government ordered the Cutter vaccine withdrawn on April 27. But damage had been done. "By April 30, within forty-eight hours of the recall," Offit wrote. "Cutter's vaccine had paralyzed or killed twenty-five children: fourteen in California, seven in Idaho, two in Washington, one in Illinois, and one in Colorado."

On May 6, all polio vaccinations were postponed. They were resumed on May 15 after the government had rechecked the vaccines for safety. But people were still frightened. Years later, in a suit brought against Cutter, the firm was found not negligent in making its vaccine because it had done its best making a new drug that was complicated to produce. But it was found financially liable for the calamity it had caused during that spring of 1955.

The jury foreman said: "Cutter Laboratories [brought] to market a ... vaccine which when given to plaintiffs caused them to come down with polio."

By 1961, the Sabin vaccine, named for its inventor, Dr. Albert B. Sabin, began commercial distribution in the United States and supplanted the Salk vaccine. The Sabin vaccine was a few drops of tasteless, odorless medicine delivered on a sugar cube, or for the very young, directly on the tongue. This was a "live virus," and considered more effective than the "dead virus" Salk vaccine, given by needle. This new inoculation seemed to give immunity from the disease and eliminate the ability of a person to be a carrier. Even those who had been affected with polio before getting Sabin vaccine were advised to take it, to prevent falling ill from an additional strain.

Salk, a researcher at the University of Pittsburgh, created his inactivated polio vaccine (IPV) during 1952–1953. The vaccine contained wild polio-viruses of all 3 serotypes that had been killed by means of formaldehyde; when injected intramuscularly, the vaccine elicited the production of antibodies, rendering recipients immune to the disease. On April 12, 1955, it was proclaimed that the battle against poliomyelitis had potentially been won thanks to Salk's vaccine. Unfortunately, however, 2 defective lots of the vaccine produced by Cutter Laboratories, a pharmaceutical company in Berkeley, California, contained residual live polioviruses, causing the so-called Cutter incident. In total, 192 paralytic polio cases occurred among vaccinated children and their family and community contacts, of whom 11 died.

The government temporarily suspended the vaccination program until it was determined that Cutter vaccine should be permanently withdrawn and IPV from other manufacturers could be reinitiated safely. Meanwhile, at the University of Cincinnati, Sabin was also at work on his vaccine. His approach, however, was completely different; he aimed to create a live attenuated vaccine for oral administration. This process marked the advent of the oral polio vaccine (OPV).

Sabin created his vaccine at the Children's Hospital in Cincinnati, where he subsequently tested it on 10,000 monkeys and 160 chimpanzees, as well as on himself, on his daughters, and on young volunteers recruited from among the inmates of the federal prison of Chillicothe in Ohio. However, because the painful memory of the Cutter incident was still fresh and especially because the commercial stakes were high, the US government did not consent to large-scale field testing.

Subsequent testing of Sabin's vaccine was therefore carried out in the Soviet Union. During 1959–1961, millions of children received Sabin's vaccine (77 million in the Soviet Union alone). The mass vaccination campaign in the Soviet Union demonstrated high vaccine effectiveness and resulted in licensure of OPV in the United States in 1961. Subsequently, in the United States, OPV rapidly replaced IPV during the 1960s as the vaccine of choice. OPV was preferred over IPV because it induced both systemic and intestinal immunity, was easier to administer, and was less expensive than IPV. The main drawback of OPV is that, very rarely (in 1 case out of $\approx 750,000$), Sabin viruses can mutate back to a more neurovirulent form and cause vaccine-associated paralytic polio.

In any case, Sabin's vaccine, which was economical to produce and very easy to administer on a sugar lump to children, came to be used worldwide in the 1960s. The method of administration of the Sabin vaccine inspired the popular song written by the Sherman brothers, featured in the film Mary Poppins whose refrain states, "Just a spoonful of sugar helps the medicine go down in a most delightful way." In 1961, OPV was adopted in the United States, where, in the meantime, thanks to Salk's vaccine, the spread of polio-myelitis had been markedly curbed.

Sabin's preparation was subsequently adopted by WHO, becoming the mainstay of the worldwide vaccination campaign that enabled poliomyelitis to be eradicated from many countries. Sabin's preparation was subsequently adopted by WHO, becoming the mainstay of the worldwide vaccination campaign that enabled poliomyelitis to be eradicated from many countries. The last case in the United States was reported in 1979. In 1994, WHO certified the eradication of polio from the Americas, and in 2000 from 36 countries in the Western Pacific Region, including China and Australia. In 2002, Europe was certified polio-free, followed by the entire South-East Asia Region of WHO in 2014. After 2014, polio remained endemic in only 3 countries, Nigeria, Pakistan, and Afghanistan, until August 25, 2020, when Africa was declared totally polio-free.

Albert Bruce Sabin died in the hospital of Georgetown University in Washington on March 3, 1993, at the age of 86 years. Among the many accolades that he received, in 1970 he was awarded the National Medal of Science "for numerous fundamental contributions to the understanding of viruses and viral diseases, culminating in the development of the vaccine which has eliminated poliomyelitis as a major threat to human health."

In April 1955, the results of the largest clinical trial ever held (at that time) were made public. More than 400,000 U.S. children had been immunized with Salk's IPV and, as the results of effective protection against this dreaded disease were declared. The Salk vaccine was declared 90% effective against Types II and III poliovirus and 60 to 70% effective against Type I. Within 2 hours, Salk's IPV was licensed for use. Thanks to guarantees from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis (now the March of Dimes), industrial production facilities were already built and ready to operate. The goal was to have five million U.S. children vaccinated by July 1955. Across the Atlantic, some European countries imported the Salk vaccine from the United States whereas others, including Denmark, Sweden, and the Netherlands, began vaccine production in their own government facilities.

Though determined the polio vaccines were safe by USA government officials, as early as the 1960s, vaccine batches of both the OPV and the IPV were tested and found to be contaminated with SV40. The gravity of this finding becomes evident considering that from 1955 through early 1963, approximately 98 million people worldwide were unknowingly exposed to the SV40 virus through contaminated polio vaccines. Although government agencies have assured the public that SV40 is not present in current lots of polio vaccines, there is no universally accepted scientific publication to date that confirms the absence of SV40 in polio vaccines, using the most modern molecular techniques available.

Formaldehyde In the Polio Vaxxines

To deactivate the live monkey virus, formaldehyde was used by Salk to make the polio vaccines.

Ingestion of as little as 30 mL (1 oz.) of a solution containing 37% formaldehyde has been reported to cause death in an adult. Ingestion may cause corrosive injury to the gastrointestinal mucosa, with nausea, vomiting, pain, bleeding, and perforation. Corrosive injuries are usually most pronounced in the pharyngeal mucosa, epiglottis and esophagus. Systemic effects include metabolic acidosis, CNS depression and coma, respiratory distress, and renal failure. Formaldehyde at high concentrations can cause mutational changes in cellular DNA in vitro,

But OPV's most potent superpower is also its greatest weakness. Given enough time and opportunity to spread and reproduce, the neutered virus within the vaccine can regain the ability to invade the nervous system and cause paralysis in unvaccinated or immunocompromised people (or in very, very rare cases, the vaccine recipient themselves). Just a small handful of genetic modifications—three or fewer—can spark a reversion, and the mutants, which are “better at replicating” than their kin, can take over fast, says Raul Andino, a virologist at UC San Francisco. In recent years, a few thousand cases of vaccine-derived polio have been detected around the world, far outstripping the toll of wild viruses; dozens of countries, the U.S. now among them, are battling such outbreaks, and the numbers seem to be only going up. Vaccine-derived polio is still a true rarity: Billions of oral vaccines have been administered in a global campaign since the 1950s. But it underscores “the real problem,” Lauring told me. “You’re fighting fire with fire.”

In 2020, the U.S. government finally added formaldehyde to a list of known carcinogens and admitted that the chemical styrene might cause cancer. Yet, the substance is still found in almost every vaccine. According to the Australian National Research Council, fewer than 20% but perhaps more than 10% of the general population may be susceptible to formaldehyde and may react acutely at any exposure level. More hazardous than most chemicals in 5 out of 12 ranking systems, on at least 8 federal regulatory lists, it is ranked as one of the most hazardous compounds (worst 10%) to ecosystems and human health (Environmental Defense Fund). In the body, formaldehyde can cause proteins to irreversibly bind to DNA.

Formaldehyde was used by Cutter and Salk. Salk realized that the monkey virus kidney cells and debris had to completely be removed but were being protected by the formaldehyde. Salk instituted Siez filters made from thick layers of asbestos known in the beverage industry as “gin pure”. The glass filters caused a 38% increase in cancer cells when tested.

This article recently published in The Atlantic magazine is a microcosm of how the unvaxxed are the problem, yet the recipients of the vaxxine are the ones developing the symptoms! And does anyone promote building our immune systems any longer? Eating healthy, exercising, etc.???

Selling It ~ Just a Spoonful of Sugar Helps the Medicine Go Down

This story is about polio, pesticide poisoning as a possible cause of it, and the meaning of science. We are taught that the science on polio has been settled – but is it so? And what if the world is far more complex than we think, and “the science” is not settled at all?

they all got vaccine except dad...

This actually happened to the man in the iron lung... James Wood, 34, of Charlotte, Mich. He was the only member of his family not vaccinated against polio and the only one to come down with the disease. Wood and his wife both planned to be vaccinated. One night last April they were about to go out for their bulk shots when friends dropped in and the trip was postponed. Later, an extra-money night job kept Wood from going to a vaccine clinic with his wife. The children, of course, had been vaccinated. Robert, 13, Norman, 11, Nancy, 10, James, 6, and Sarah Jane, 3, had all three shots; Edgar, 2, had two. Baby John was born after dad was stricken. "Jim just didn't get to it," Mrs. Wood says of the ill fortune that befell her husband. "Now, the only good will be if what happened to us helps somebody else."

The iconic song lyric from the 1964 Disney film “Mary Poppins” is a lesson in making otherwise mundane or daunting tasks more enjoyable. But the idea for the tune actually came from a conversation the songwriter had with his young son about the polio vaccine – and the son of that songwriter is using that nugget of film music history to emphasize the importance of trusting medical professionals during the coronavirus pandemic. Jeff Sherman, whose father Robert Sherman is one half of famed songwriting duo the Sherman Brothers, told the story behind “A Spoonful of Sugar”. Sherman told CNN that as a child, he was afraid of getting shots and would often try to run away from the nurses who tried to administer them. So when he told his father one afternoon that he had received the oral polio vaccine at school that day, his father was surprised.

He recalled receiving the oral polio vaccine at school as a child. When he came home that afternoon, he told his father about his day. They told him they put it on a sugar cube and you just ate it,” Sherman wrote. “He stared at me, then went to the phone and called my uncle Dick.” Unbeknownst to Sherman at the time, his father and his uncle Richard Sherman were in the process of composing music for the film “Mary Poppins” – and had been struggling to come up with a new song. A song they wrote called “Through the Eyes of Love” had been rejected, and Walt Disney had asked the duo to give him something snappier. Robert Sherman’s conversation with his son finally gave him the catchy slogan that he and his brother needed: A Spoonful of Sugar (Helps the Medicine Go Down).

In 1956 Elvis Presley got a polio vaccination on national TV. That one event was partly responsible for raising immunization levels in the United States from 0.6% to 80% in just 6 months.

The odd connection between vaccination and ‘Mary Poppins’

Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882-1945) President 1933-1945

America's longest serving President became a freemason in Holland Lodge, New York in 1911 and remained an active freemason for the rest of his life. In 1935 he presided over Architect Lodge, New York, when his sons Elliot and Franklin Delano Jr were made Master Masons in their own right.

Franklin Roosevelt's crusade to defeat polio actually began more than 10 years before he created the group that would become known as the March of Dimes. On January 3, 1938, they announced the creation of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, or NFIP. O'Connor set about creating a national network of local chapters dedicated to raising money to combat the disease. However, it wasn't until later that year that the NFIP became associated with the moniker most people know it by today, the March of Dimes. Vaudeville star Eddie Cantor, a noted philanthropist, organized a coast-to-coast radio broadcast to promote the new foundation. Making a play on the popular "March of Time" newsreels of the era, he urged Americans (still feeling the effects of the Great Depression) to donate whatever spare cash they could to the fight against polio.

Just 10 cents from every child (and presumably their parents) could help the cause, and would create a "march of dimes to reach all the way to the White House." Later promotional programs featured Cantor performing alongside other Hollywood luminaries, including Bing Crosby and Jack Benny. The appeals quickly paid off: In it's first campaign, the NFIP received more than $18 million in donations. Cantor's phrase would soon become synonymous with the fledgling foundation, though it would not adopt the name March of Dimes officially until 1976.

The March of Dimes used the funds raised in these early efforts to set up new research facilities to find a cure for polio as well as dozens of local hospitals to care for the afflicted – including a clinic at the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama for African Americans unable to gain access to the nearby (but segregated) Warm Springs facility.

40 Years of Human Experimentation in America: The Tuskegee Study

The goal was to “observe the natural history of untreated syphilis” in black populations, but the subjects were completely unaware and were instead told they were receiving treatment for bad blood when in fact, they received no treatment at all.

<https://www.mcgill.ca/oss/article/history/40-years-human-experimentation-america-tuskegee-study>

Starting in 1932, 600 African American men from Macon County, Alabama were enlisted to partake in a scientific experiment on syphilis. The “Tuskegee Study of Untreated Syphilis in the Negro Male,” was conducted by the United States Public Health Service (USPHS) and involved blood tests, x-rays, spinal taps and autopsies of the subjects. The goal was to “observe the natural history of untreated syphilis” in black populations. But the subjects were unaware of this and were simply told they were receiving treatment for bad blood. Actually, they received no treatment at all. Even after penicillin was discovered as a safe and reliable cure for syphilis, the majority of men did not receive it.

The US government set their study in Macon County due to estimates that 35% of its population was infected with syphilis. In 1932, the initial patients between the ages of 25 and 60 were recruited under the guise of receiving free medical care for “bad blood,” a colloquial term encompassing anemia, syphilis, fatigue and other conditions. Told that the treatment would last only six months, they received physical examinations, x-rays, spinal taps, and when they died, autopsies.

It was in these moments that the Tuskegee study’s true nature became clear. Rather than simply observing and documenting the natural progression of syphilis in the community as had been planned, the researchers intervened: first by telling the participants that they were being treated (a lie), and then again by preventing their participants from seeking treatment that could save their lives. Thus, the original basis for the study that the people of Macon County would likely not seek treatment and thus could be observed as their syphilis progressed and became a self-fulfilling prophecy.

The Tuskegee study has had lasting effects on America. It’s estimated that the life expectancy of black men fell by up to 1.4 years when the study’s details came to light. Many also blame the study for impacting the willingness of black individuals to willingly participate in medical research today.

We know all about evil Nazis who experimented on prisoners. We condemn the scientists in Marvel movies who carry out tests on prisoners of war. But we’d do well to remember that America has also used its own people as lab rats. Yet to this day, no one has been prosecuted for their role in dooming 399 men to syphilis.

Oral Vaccine for All

Total War on Polio In the Bay Area

By David Perlman
Science Correspondent

Six Bay Area counties will join medical forces this fall in a massive effort to vaccinate every man, woman and child in the region against polio.

Health departments and medical societies will mobilize every physician, every nurse and every medical aide to carry the battle for immunity to an estimated 3.5 million people.

The weapon will be the long-awaited Sabin oral vaccine, which has been completely approved by the United States Public Health Service, and which has already wiped out polio among millions in Europe, Africa and Latin America.

A Victim's Story

Polio Can Strike the Old As Well as the Young

By Richard Hallgren
 "Polio used to be called infantile paralysis," Charles Lyser recalls, his expression ironic, betraying only a trace of bitterness. People thought only young people were its victims, he said.

But Lyser was 48 years old when polio struck him down. He was run-down, overworked, during that autumn of 1954, Lyser remembered, and what appeared to be a "bad case of flu" caused him to take two or three days off from his job at Standard Oil in Richmond.

"Then it hit me . . . like a demon. I couldn't move my arms or my hands or my legs. I couldn't breathe . . . it was the most horrible feeling imaginable."

Lyser spent nine months in an iron lung and 15 months altogether in the hospital.

Whatever age he was, there was little that Lyser or anyone else could do to prevent polio back in 1954.

There is now. And like hundreds of other stricken "post-polios" throughout the Bay Area, Lyser speaks firmly for the massive "K.O. Polio" campaign with Sabin oral vaccine that could wipe out the disease here.

People are "crazy," he says, if they neglect to protect themselves permanently against the disease during the polio drive—the lifesaving tasteless vaccine is placed on sugar cubes three times (September 23, November 4 and December 9) and that's all there is.

Lyser came out of the hospital with "40 pounds of muscle gone." His arms and legs are withered, shrunken and he is unable to lift the upper part of his arms.

He sleeps in a rocking bed to help him breathe at night.

Today, global leaders confirmed US$ 2.6 billion in funding toward the Global Polio Eradication Initiative's (GPEI) 2022-2026 Strategy to end polio at a pledging moment co-hosted by Germany's Federal Ministry for Economic Cooperation and Development (BMZ) at the World Health Summit in Berlin.

The funding will support global efforts to overcome the final hurdles to polio eradication, vaccinate 370 million children annually over the next five years and continue disease surveillance across 50 countries.

"No place is safe until polio has been eradicated everywhere. As long as the virus still exists somewhere in the world, it can spread – including in our own country. We now have a realistic chance to eradicate polio completely, and we want to jointly seize that chance," said Svenja Schulze, Federal Minister for Economic Cooperation and Development, Germany. "Germany will remain a strong and committed partner in the global fight against polio. This year, it is providing EUR 35 million for this cause. And next year we plan to further strengthen our efforts and support GPEI with EUR 37 million – pending parliamentary approval. By supporting the GPEI, we are also strengthening national health systems. That leads to healthier societies, far beyond the polio response."

Wild poliovirus is endemic in just two countries – Pakistan and Afghanistan. However, after just six cases were recorded in 2021, 29 cases have been recorded so far this year, including a small number of new detections in southeast Africa linked to a strain originating in Pakistan. Additionally, outbreaks of cVDPV, variants of the poliovirus that can emerge in places where not enough people have been immunized, continue to spread across parts of Africa, Asia and Europe, with new outbreaks detected in the United States, Israel and the United Kingdom in recent months.

With New Commitment, Gates Foundation Joins Call to Help End Polio

BERLIN (October 16, 2022) – Today at the World Health Summit, the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation announced it will commit $1.2 billion to support efforts to end all forms of polio globally. The announcement was made ahead of a key pledging moment that will be co-hosted by Germany and the Global Polio Eradication Initiative (GPEI).

The new financial commitment will support implementation of the GPEI's Polio Eradication Strategy 2022-2026, which aims to end wild poliovirus in the last two endemic countries—Pakistan and Afghanistan—and stop outbreaks of new variants of the virus. The foundation has contributed nearly $5 billion to GPEI.

“The discovery of poliovirus in New York state, London and Jerusalem this year has taken many by surprise, but public-health researchers fighting to eradicate the disease say it was only a matter of time. No country in the world is immune to the effects of polio,” says Zulfiqar Bhutta, a global-health researcher at the Aga Khan University in Karachi, Pakistan. “It’s all interconnected.” The virus found in these regions is derived from an oral polio vaccine used in some countries. So far, only two cases of polio-related paralysis have been reported, in Jerusalem in February and New York in June¹; the New York infection was the first such US case in nearly a decade. But wastewater samples in all three areas suggest that the virus is circulating more widely. Polio causes irreversible paralysis in less than one in 200 of the susceptible people it infects, so the cases of paralysis suggest that many other people there have been infected, says Walter Orenstein, who studies infectious diseases at Emory University in Atlanta, Georgia. “Cases like that are just the tip of the iceberg,” he says. “It’s very concerning.”

Nature talked to researchers about the scale of the outbreak, and what can be done to stop it.

Wild poliovirus circulates in only two countries — Afghanistan and Pakistan — where this year nine cases had been reported by June. But vaccine-derived poliovirus appears periodically elsewhere, particularly in Africa and Asia. These cases come from a widely used oral vaccine that contains live, weakened virus that sometimes mutates to a dangerous form capable of infecting the nervous system.

Neither the United States nor the United Kingdom use that vaccine, opting instead for an injectable vaccine containing inactivated virus. This vaccine can keep the virus from infecting the nervous system, but it is not as effective as the oral virus at reducing viral shedding and halting transmission, says Raul Andino-Pavlovsky, a microbiologist at the University of California, San Francisco.

High polio vaccination rates in the United Kingdom, Israel and the United States mean that most children will be spared the virus’s worst effects (about 94% of US 5- and 6-year-olds are vaccinated). But unvaccinated people are vulnerable to the illness.

“This virus is very, very good at finding unvaccinated individuals,” says Orenstein. In the 1990s, a poliovirus outbreak in the Netherlands established a foothold in a community with a relatively low vaccination rate, despite the country’s overall vaccination coverage of more than 90%, says Oliver Rosenbauer, a spokesperson for the Global Polio Eradication Initiative of the World Health Organization (WHO) in Geneva, Switzerland. The outbreak resulted in 2 deaths and 59 cases of paralysis, and occurred 14 years after the country’s last endemic case of polio.

KEY POINTS

- The CDC is considering using the novel oral polio vaccine to quash an outbreak in the greater New York City area that left one person paralyzed over the summer.
- New York has continued to detect poliovirus in sewage samples, with the latest coming from Brooklyn and Queens.
- The U.S. currently uses the inactivated polio vaccine, which is highly effective at preventing paralysis but does not stop transmission of the virus.
- Oral polio vaccines are much more effective at stopping transmission, though they use a live virus strain that carries the rare risk of mutating into a virulent form.

“New York Gov. Kathy Hochul on Friday declared a state of emergency over polio to boost vaccination rates in the state amid further evidence that the virus is spreading in communities. Poliovirus has now been detected in sewage samples from four counties in the New York metro area as well as in the city itself. The counties are Rockland, Orange, Sullivan, and the latest, Nassau.

The samples tested positive for poliovirus that can cause paralysis in humans, according to state health officials. Unvaccinated individuals who live, work, go to school or visit Orange, Rockland, Nassau, New York City and Sullivan are at the highest risk of paralytic disease, officials said.

“Poop Patrols” ???

New York began wastewater surveillance after an unvaccinated adult caught polio in Rockland County in July and suffered from paralysis, the first known infection in the U.S. in nearly a decade.

The emergency declaration will expand the network of vaccine administrators to include pharmacists, midwives and EMS workers in an effort to boost the immunization rate in areas where it has slipped. New York Health Commissioner Dr. Mary Bassett called on people who are unvaccinated to get their shots immediately. Individuals and families who are unsure of their vaccination status should contact a health care provider, clinic or the county health department to make sure they are up to date on their shots.

“On polio, we simply cannot roll the dice,” Bassett said. “I urge New Yorkers to not accept any risk at all. Polio immunization is safe and effective – protecting nearly all people against disease who receive the recommended doses.” The polio vaccination rate is alarmingly low in some New York counties. The vaccination rate is 60% in Rockland, 58% in Orange, 62% in Sullivan and 79% in Nassau, according to the health department. The statewide average for polio immunization is about 79%. The goal of the vaccination campaign is to boost immunization rates well above 90% statewide, according to the health department. Some New Yorkers who completed their vaccine series should receive a single lifetime booster shot, health officials said. These individuals include people who might have contact with someone infected or thought to be infected with poliovirus or members of the infected person’s household. Health care workers should also get a booster if they work in areas where poliovirus has been detected and they might handle specimens or treat patients who may have polio. People who might be exposed to wastewater due to their job should also consider getting a booster, health officials said.

Return of the Marburg Virus?

Attorney Todd Callender joins the The Prather Point to discuss the next PLANdemic (the Marburg pathogen), which will be the excuse used to force the unvaxxed into quarantine camps (FEMA) where kill-shots will be administered. He also says that those who received the Covid shots already have the dormant Marburg virus encapsulated in lipid nanoparticles, which can be activated via 5G frequencies. Those who have Marburg will then become zombie-like, because it affects frontal cortex brain function.

In mid-August 1967, six years after the SV40 problem came to light, a mysterious, dangerous, infectious disease broke out simultaneously in German and Yugoslavian research institutes. Thirty-one people, including technicians making polio vaccines, suddenly became ill - and seven died. All those infected had direct contact with monkeys or their blood, organs or tissue cultures. Other people later got the disease, too, including hospital personnel who had contact with these patients. In one case, a woman contracted the disease from the semen of her husband, who had been infected three months earlier. Though millions of monkeys had been used as experimental animals and as raw material to provide kidneys to make vaccines, no such disease had ever been seen before. Eventually the "Marburg virus" was isolated, and its source was traced to monkeys shipped from Uganda.

But if HIV were one of those numerous anonymous monkey viruses contaminating the early Salk and Sabin vaccines, presumably there would have been an explosion of AIDS in the U.S. outside the currently defined high-risk groups: male homosexuals, intravenous-drug users, hemophiliacs and the sexual partners of those people. Of course, that sort of eruption hasn't happened in the U.S. But it did happen someplace else: in equatorial Africa.

Key facts

- Marburg virus disease (MVD), formerly known as Marburg haemorrhagic fever, is a severe, often fatal illness in humans.
- The virus causes severe viral haemorrhagic fever in humans.
- The average MVD case fatality rate is around 50%. Case fatality rates have varied from 24% to 88% in past outbreaks depending on virus strain and case management.
- Early supportive care with rehydration, and symptomatic treatment improves survival. There is as yet no licensed treatment proven to neutralize the virus, but a range of blood products, immune therapies and drug therapies are currently under development.

- Rousettus aegyptiacus, fruit bats of the Pteropodidae family, are considered to be natural hosts of Marburg virus. The Marburg virus is transmitted to people from fruit bats and spreads among humans through human-to-human transmission.

Marburg virus disease was initially detected in 1967 after simultaneous outbreaks in Marburg and Frankfurt in Germany; and in Belgrade, Serbia. Two large outbreaks that occurred simultaneously in Marburg and Frankfurt in Germany, and in Belgrade, Serbia, in 1967, led to the initial recognition of the disease. The outbreak was associated with laboratory work using African green monkeys (Cercopithecus aethiops) imported from Uganda. Subsequently, outbreaks and sporadic cases have been reported in Angola, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Kenya, South Africa (in a person with recent travel history to Zimbabwe) and Uganda.

Illness caused by Marburg virus begins abruptly, with high fever, severe headache and severe malaise. Muscle aches and pains are a common feature. Severe watery diarrhoea, abdominal pain and cramping, nausea and vomiting can begin on the third day. Diarrhoea can persist for a week. The appearance of patients at this phase has been described as showing “ghost-like” drawn features, deep-set eyes, expressionless faces, and extreme lethargy.

“A virus that reverted from the vaccine emerged from a kid that was vaccinated, and because other humans that were around were not vaccinated or resistant to the virus, the virus has started to take hold in the human population,” explains Raul Andino, a professor of microbiology and immunology at the University of California, San Francisco. “This case of imported virus came into New York and took hold in the whole population because everybody’s susceptible to infection ... Basically, we have a silent epidemic, and that doesn’t cause a problem until somebody is not vaccinated.”

Yet it makes an unmistakable ‘noise’, causes unmistakable physical and mental damage, and unmistakably interferes with the daily social life, i.e., unmistakable to a trained observer, one who knows what to look for.

The public cannot comprehend this weapon, and therefore cannot believe that they are being attacked and subdued by a weapon.

The public might instinctively feel that something is wrong, but that is because of the technical nature of the silent weapon, they cannot express their feeling in a rational way, or handle the problem with intelligence. Therefore, they do not know how to cry for help, and do not know how to associate with others to defend themselves against it.

When a silent weapon is applied gradually, the public adjusts/adapts to its presence and learns to tolerate its encroachment on their lives until the pressure (psychological via economic) becomes too great and they crack up.

Therefore, the silent weapon is a type of biological warfare. It attacks the vitality, options, and mobility of the individuals of a society by knowing, understanding, manipulating, and attacking their sources of natural and social energy, and their physical, mental, and emotional strengths and weaknesses.”

Chapter 7

My Story

I am currently 66 years young. At age 56 I went through a protracted difficult custody legal hearing that went on for months and was very emotional. It was then my one leg began to weaken, I lost control of my left foot and my balance became difficult.

My first episode where I knew something was going very wrong with my body was when I was at a party and fell backwards through a plate glass window when my balance gave out. Luckily I was not injured. At first, I thought I must be aging. Previously in younger days, I played Division I tennis in college as well as competed on the World Cup Mogul Tour while skiing over 100 days per year. My legs were my life and I always prided myself on being in good physical condition, yet no matter how much I worked out, my physical body, gradually, and degeneratively, kept digressing and I could no longer build muscle mass.

According to Dr. Garcia, my polio was activated due to the emotional stress I went through with my divorce that went over a couple of years. He asked me what happened to me at age 56 out of the blue and I recalled that was exactly when my divorce began and I now recall my legs beginning to go out at the time and thought i was just getting older. Doc G told me that there are many different triggering causal factors, but emotions are definitely one of them. He has seen many cases like mine, yet curing the issues he says is still “problematic”.

After my lengthy divorce was finalized, the disconnection to my feet began where I first had one dropped foot, then another and even climbing a few stairs became painful and difficult. The dropped feet would make me fall on face time and time and time again, until I learned how to relearn how to walk when I could no longer lift my toes to walk. (It's only through injury do we realize with our real eyes and efforts how much we use that injured anatomy of our amazing bodies.) As soon as I really began to understand my body was now betraying me vs. serving me, I began to make a total effort to heal. I went religiously to yoga, even though I'd fall over onto others sometimes and always had to use the side ballet bar for balancing poses.

Humbling, you have noooooooo idea. Just walking in a store I could/would suddenly fall flat on my face...except for my decades of training in skiing where I learned to fall not only gracefully, but consciously. Climbing back up, the swarm begins to come closer, "you all right" and I say yea, just recent surgery, but it's getting better. Sometimes the pain of the inflammation got so great that I had to hobble to just get my car and just drive because it was less pain when you have to focus other ways, your pain is not as present. Pain is actually thought physicalized, if you can get your head around that.

I went back to the gym, swam miles, got laser treatments, changed my diet. Then one foot began to swell up one night on me in the middle of the night at age 62. My foot looked like a small watermelon. My dear friend applied turmeric baths and such. I had to crawl on my butt sometimes to get from the bed to the kitchen. I could not put any weight on the foot at times. When I got better, I went back to the pool gimping about and hardly able to push off the starting blocks, let alone make a flip turn like the good 'ol dayz. People pointed at me over the months at the gym in appreciation of the effort.

On April 19, 1995 my younger brother, 38 years young with 5 children at the time, passed through. He had been "battling" diagnosed cancer that was biopsied from his cheek 6 months earlier. Dr. Garcia has stated that the latent polio parasites are 'activated' by some event, mine was emotional, and I believe my brothers activation was when a needle was stuck in his left cheek to biopsy a growth he had there, though I cannot offer any solid proof. After his biopsy he was eating a carrot and got lodged in his throat where he could no swallow (a symptom of PPS) and then he was taken to the emergency room where they could not dislodge the carrot and eventually he blew it out his esophagus and had to have surgery. A few weeks later he died of said cancer.

Marin County K.O, Polio Campaign, 1962

On September 23, 1963, under supervision of the Marin County Medical Society, sugar lumps dosed with the serum were given to seemingly endless lines of men, women, and children. A 25-cent donation per person to off-set costs was requested but not required. The American Legion offered free transportation to those who needed it.

Soon, it was urged that everyone over the age of three months in Marin and elsewhere to receive the Sabin vaccine. Medical communities had a challenge: they needed to get everyone inoculated, as quickly as possible, a feat requiring delivery of medical resources, efficient execution and a bit of p.r. A public health campaign in Marin (and elsewhere) named “K.O. Polio” was publicized with the cooperation of local TV, radio, parent-teacher associations, the Red Cross, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and other service and civic clubs. “K.O. Polio” centers set up in schools, churches, and community centers. In Marin, the word went out for the first dose to be given on Sunday, September 23, 1962: “K.O. Polio Sunday, Sabin Vaccine, Free to All.”

The U.S. Surgeon General, Luther L. Terry, called upon everyone in the Bay Area to participate. He lauded the Sabin vaccine as a “safe and effective weapon” against the disease. Stored in a warehouse building at Marin General Hospital, the vaccine was distributed to twenty sites across the county.

Hundreds of volunteers were given the vaccine a few days prior to the big day, as a “dry run” rehearsal event at Marin Catholic High School in Greenbrae. On that sunny Sunday, about 85% of Marin, or 128,000 people, were given the a dose of the vaccine. Over 2,200 people showed up at Lagunitas School in San Geronimo, and nearly 6,000 at Manor School in Fairfax. The pop-up clinic at San Rafael High School alone inoculated 11,687 individuals, the most out of all Marin “K.O. Polio” locations. The wait was often long that day, but as one gentleman standing in line quipped, “Why shouldn’t we be happy? We’re all going to get sugar.”

Dr. Eugene P. Shatkin was the Chairman of the K.O. Polio campaign in Marin and directed the tremendous effort of organization that preceded September 23, and the follow-up events. Dr. Shatkin thanked the doctors and volunteers, and described the event as “the most heart-warming experience for all of us, and in particular for the [Marin] Medical Society’s K.O. Polio”.

Suspicious about the efficacy of vaccines grew in 1955, when batches manufactured by Cutter Laboratories of Berkeley potentially exposed tens of thousands of children to polio, and left five children dead and dozens paralyzed. The Cutter-produced vaccine had been given to children in Marin County without incident. Regardless, the general public perception of mass vaccinations changed considerably as a result of this vaccine-associated illness, and vaccination became a hard sell.

By 1961, the Sabin vaccine – named for its inventor, Dr. Albert B. Sabin – began commercial distribution in the United States, and supplanted the Salk vaccine. The Sabin vaccine was a few drops of tasteless, odorless medicine delivered on a sugar cube, or for the very young, directly on the tongue. This was a “live virus,” and considered more effective than the “dead virus” Salk vaccine, given by needle. This new inoculation seemed to give immunity from the disease and eliminate the ability of a person to be a carrier. Even those who had been affected with polio before getting Sabin vaccine were advised to take it, to prevent falling ill from an additional strain.

Today we may receive one or two doses of COVID-19 vaccine depending on the manufacturer. Then, the Sabin vaccine required three doses, each taken about five weeks apart. These three doses would target each of the three distinct strains of the polio virus, with no additional booster shots required. (note booster shots back then too, and there was even a Small pox vaccine farm in San Rafael in 1875!, which i cover in my marin county book i just published).

Chapter 8

You Cannot “Catch A Cold” From Someone – Germ vs. Terrain Theory

It's the Environment that makes us sick! That is why in a room of people only a few get the flu, common cold, etc. and not everyone in the room. During the 1918 plague, where more people died from the vaxxine than the non-innoculated, scientists injected the “Spanish Flu” up the noses of 3 dozen individuals. NOT ONE of the 36 got the Spanish Flu! Yet you won't hear this news on whorporate disinformation TV.

GERM THEORY IS A WEAPON

GERM THEORY IS A SCIENTIFICALLY PROVEN LIE. ALL ILLNESS IS FORMED INTERNALLY (TERRAIN THEORY). THE MAIN CAUSE OF ILLNESS IS DEHYDRATION AND MALNUTRITION. HUMAN MADE CHEMICALS AND TOXINS DESTROY THE HEALTH OF THOSE WITH A COMPROMISED IMMUNE SYSTEM. OUR HEALTH IS DETERMINED BY WHAT WE EAT, DRINK, THINK, SAY AND DO. GERM THEORY HAS BEEN USED AS A WEAPON TO INDUCE FEAR, TRUAMA, PANIC, AND CONTROL OVER HUMANITY, FOR WELL OVER A CENTURY. EXPERIMENTS HAVE PROVEN THAT HUMANS CANNOT PASS DISEASE FROM ONE TO ANOTHER. THE ROCKEFELLERS, AND ROTHSCHILDS OF THIS WORLD, INDOCTRINATE US WITH NOTHING BUT DECEIT, AND LIES....TO SELL US POISONOUS PETROLEUM BASED PHARMACEUTICALS. HUMANITY NEEDS TO RESEARCH BEFORE CONSENTING TO THE ABUSE OF OUR CHILDREN. DR ANDREW KAUFMAN IS A GREAT PLACE TO START UNLEARNING, AND RELEARNING. “LET FOOD BE THY MEDICINE, AND MEDICINE BE THY FOOD.” ~ HIPPOCRATES

How many people know about Antoine Bechamp, and the massive fraud of a man that was Louis Pasteur? Not many I'd bet, as Bechamp was too erased from history. The reason behind this is actually much more sinister than one can imagine. During his lifetime, Antoine Bechamp (1816-1908) was a well-known and widely respected professor, teacher, and researcher. He was an active member of the French Academy of Sciences and gave many presentations there during his long career. He also published many papers, all of which still exist and are available. And yet, he has disappeared from history.

On the other hand, Louis Pasteur (1822-1895) is one of the great rock stars of medicine and biology. Of the two – Bechamp or Pasteur – he's the one you've most likely heard of. His is one of the most recognizable names in modern science. Many discoveries and advances in medicine and microbiology are attributed to him, including vaccination and the center piece of his science – the germ theory of disease.

Louis Pasteur was actually a liar, a coward and a fraud. Pasteur renounced his own theory on his death bed. Germ Theory was all wrong:

"It's the terrain, not the germ." quoted Louis Pasteur on his death bed...It's not the bacteria or the viruses themselves that produce the disease, it's the chemical by-products and constituents of these microorganisms enacting upon the unbalanced, malfunctioning cell metabolism of the human body that in actuality produce disease. If the body's cellular metabolism and pH is perfectly balanced or poised, it is susceptible to no illness or disease".

In other words, disease associated microorganisms do not originally produce a disease condition any more than a vulture produces a dead rabbit or rats produce garbage. The diseased acidic cellular environment was created by a toxic diet, toxic environmental exposures and a toxic lifestyle supporting the morbid changes of germs to bacteria, bacteria to viruses, viruses to fungal forms and fungal forms to cancer cells in the body. This classical error of referring to symptoms as the disease is perpetrated to this day in all medical schools trickled down from the al procedures. The reason why all physicians are kept in the dark by medical schools teaching Pasteur's germ theory is that if they are taught the truth that it's the inner condition of the patient (i.e. oxygen deprivation, nutritional deficiencies, acidic pH, built up toxins in and around the cells, poor circulation, toxic emotions, etc.), not the germs that creates the growth medium for bacteria, viruses, parasites or cancer cell growth, the majority of doctors would throw away their script pad and surgical knife and focus their treatment protocols on reestablishing a healthy cellular environment, which keeps the germs, bacteria and viruses in check.

By killing the viruses, bacteria or cancer cells with their destructive weapons of war, they trigger microzyma evolution that makes the enemy pathogens stronger by creating resistant strains reaping more disease in the future. Nobody correlates their newly formed disease a year later with the past drug therapy. The result if the truth was told, a multi-billion-dollar sick care industry that has been meticulously built by the global elite for a century would be exposed and crumble like the Babylonian empire of old. There is no medical doctrine so potentially dangerous as a partial truth implemented as whole truth.

Because of political reasons, Antoine Bechamp's name and research findings along with the germ theory controversy have been omitted from history, medical and biological books, even encyclopedias. It seems that the historical scientific assassination of Antoine Bechamp resulted in medical science's monopolization of pharmaceuticals and vaccine research. This has meant untold misery for the human race. It's ironic that Pasteur himself was reported to have admitted on his deathbed that Claude Bernard was right, the microbe is nothing, the terrain is everything, but would never give credit for Bechamp's discoveries. Bechamp's discovery in his early research, that all living things contain tiny granules, which he named microzyma's, was the most profound discovery of the 20th century. Microzyma's can trigger life and/or Death. Microzyma's (meaning small ferments), inhabits cells, blood and lymph fluid. They act as both the builder and recycler of organisms. They inhabit cells, the fluid between cells, the blood and the lymph. In the state of healthy terrain, microzyma's act harmoniously and fermentation occurs normally and beneficially making healthy aerobic microbes like acidophilus and bifidus.

Under diseased pathological internal conditions (low oxygen, malnutrition, acidic pH, poor circulation, etc.), microzyma's can change the faces of microbes like a chameleon. This is called pleomorphism. Pleo means many and morph means form. So pleomorphism means to change to many forms. These pathogens can either evolve or devolve depending on the surrounding conditions of the cell. The answer in disease processes lies in the condition of your cellular balance or will it support the development of unwanted guests?

In the early stages of acidic pH in the body's tissues, the warning symptoms are mild. These include such things as skin eruptions, headaches, allergies, colds, flu and sinus problems. These symptoms are frequently treated (manipulated) with antibiotic drugs and suppressive medications. With continued suppression of the warning signals of an acidic and nutrient deficient environment, more serious symptoms arise with the disease driven deeper. Weakened organs and systems start to give way (heart, lung, thyroid, adrenals, the liver, kidneys, etc.). Unfortunately, symptom manipulation with pharmacology creates a magical shell game of switching diseases, creating more serious symptoms and disease conditions in the future that are totally different from the original disease.

The quick fix drug game of voodoo medicine is what's causing the disease epidemic in this country and puts hospitals and doctors as the number three killer in the U.S. What is modern medicine doing with their destructive weapons of war? You can't kill microzymas, they're indestructible. You can only trigger a morbid evolution of anaerobic pathogens to molds, fungus, yeast and cancer. It's the microzymas that are responsible for the decomposition of a dead body back to the soil and creating life to the soil for future plant growth. Microzymas are an indestructible living entity that cannot be destroyed by heat, antibiotics, or any other weapon of war. My view is that the toxins (acids) from the microforms combine to provoke the body to produce symptoms of a healing crisis to purge or eliminate the toxic residues from the nose through a runny nose, the skin through sweat, the colon through diarrhea, and increased respiration. So, it's important to remember, it is not the pathogens themselves which initiate disease, they only show up because of an acidic, compromised, cell terrain. Mosquitoes seek the stagnant water, but they don't cause the swamp to become stagnant.

All Disease Is Acid Related

In general, degenerative diseases are the result of acid waste build-up within weak cells and organs that are too weak to clean house. When we are born, we have the highest alkaline mineral concentration, establishing the highest pH. That is why most degenerative diseases do not occur when you are young. They occur usually after 40 years of age. The underlying causes of cancer, heart disease, arteriosclerosis, high blood pressure, diabetes, arthritis, gout, kidney disease, asthma, allergies, psoriasis and other skin disorders, indigestion, diarrhea, nausea, obesity, tooth and gum diseases, osteoporosis, morning sickness, eye diseases, etc., are the accumulation of acids in tissues and cells, poor blood and lymph circulation, and poor cell activity due to toxic acidic residues accumulating around the cell membrane which prevent nutritional elements from entering the cell.

All scavengers breed like parasites. After food is digested and absorbed into the bloodstream it is carried to all 75 trillion cells of the body via the circulatory system. The body eliminates what it can and the remainder settles in the weakest cells. Those which are not strong enough to clean house. In this accumulating, deposited, dead waste matter and pustulant soup, germs like bacteria, viruses, fungus and parasites breed. Rotting takes place and pus (which is decomposed blood), parasites, flukes, tapeworms, hardened mucous and other acid waste products form. This, science calls disease:

The name of the particular disease depends upon the location of the deposits of this acidic, toxic, pustulant soup. If the accumulating deposits are in the joints, it's called arthritis. If the poisonous waste matter accumulates in the pancreas and saturates the beta cells that synthesize insulin it's called diabetes. If the toxic sludge is dumped in the lungs, it's called chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. It's the same disease. Wherever your weakest link in the chain of organs is, that's where your genetic disposition for disease will be.

If the overload is too great for the blood, excess acid is dumped into the tissues and cells for storage. Then the lymphatic system and immune system must neutralize what it can and attempt to discard the toxic waste. If the lymphatic system is overloaded generally due to a lack of exercise, acid deposits will suffocate the cells and damage DNA. If the lymphatic system is pumping through exercise and circulation, they will pick up the acid wastes and neutralize them through the kidneys. Unfortunately, they must dump them right back into the blood stream. This will force the blood to attempt to gather more alkaline salts in order to compensate while stressing the liver and kidneys. This robs Peter to pay Paul.

The Body Electric

A healthy condition depends upon a high level of electromagnetic negative charge on the surfaces of tissue cells. Acidity is the opposite charge and dampens out these electrical fields. If tissue pH deviates too far to the acid side, cellular metabolism will cease and oxygen deprivation will occur. Acidity and lack of oxygen are the ideal environmental condition for morbid microforms to flourish.

These are the primary symptoms of disease. So in short, acute or recurrent illnesses and infections are either the attempt by the body to mobilize mineral reserves from all parts of the body, or crisis attempts at detoxification. Unless the treatment actually removes acids from the body and replaces nutrient building blocks, the cure at best will be only temporary and a cover-up Band-Aid therapy, shoving the disease deeper into a chronic state. Remember, there is not one drug on the market that reduces the acidity of the body or addresses any kind of nutritional deficiency. The sobering fact is, almost all drugs are acidic, especially antibiotics, and add to the acid residues. And if the drugs were successful at removing acids from an infected area, the acid would migrate to some other weak tissue in the body that will create side effects there, unless the treatment involves the disposal of acids from all body organs.

For this reason, today's medical science is pathetic when it comes to the cure for degenerative and metabolic disease. During their lifetimes, the rivalry between Bechamp and Pasteur was constant, and often bitter. They clashed frequently both in speeches before the Academy, and in papers presented to it. Bechamp repeatedly showed that Pasteur's 'findings' included frequent plagiarizations (and distortions) of Bechamp's own work. When Bechamp and others objected to the plagiarization, Pasteur set out to use his political clout to destroy Bechamp's career and reputation. Unfortunately, Pasteur largely succeeded. He was more skillful than Bechamp at playing politics and attending the right functions. He was good at making friends in high circles and was popular with the royal family. Pasteur, in other words, was an A-lister. Bechamp was a worker.

The ideas, as well as the characters, of the two men were fundamentally opposed. Pasteur argued for what we now call the 'germ theory' of disease, while Bechamp's work sought to confirm pleomorphism; the idea that all life is based on the forms that a certain class of organisms take during the various stages of their life-cycles. This difference is fundamental. Bechamp believed that his work showed the connection between science and religion – the one a search after truth, and the other the effort to live up to individual belief. It is fitting that his book Les Mycrozymas culminates in the acclamation of God as the Supreme Source. Bechamp's teachings are in direct opposition to the materialistic views of the modern science of the twentieth century. Mr. Antoine Bechamp was able to scientifically prove that germs are the chemical-byproducts and constituents of pleomorphic microorganisms enacting upon the unbalanced, malfunctioning cell metabolism and dead tissue that actually produces disease. Bechamp found that the diseased, acidic, low-oxygen cellular environment is created by a toxic/nutrient deficient diet, toxic emotions, and a toxic lifestyle. His findings demonstrate how cancer develops through the morbid changes of germs to bacteria, bacteria to viruses, viruses to fungal forms, and fungal forms to cancer cells. He found microzymas present in every cell in the bloodstream, in animals, in plants, and even in rocks. He found them present in the remains of dead animals many years after the animal's body had withered away to dust. He observed that in a healthy organism, microzymas work at repairing and nourishing all cells; but when the terrain becomes acidic, the microzymas morph into viruses, bacteria, yeast, fungus, and mold and prepare to break the host down.

Chapter 9

Vxx'd To Spiritual & Souless Death

Rudolph Steiner was a 20 th century prophet and also founder of the Waldorf Schools, Biodynamic Farming and Anthroposphy. His predictions about what inoculations will do in the future now, was a design to remove the Spirit and soul of the individual thereby ensuring their souls would never be able to reincarnate on Earth and Satan/Lucifer's prophecy to 'better rule in hell, than serve in heaven' will be realized. The "War in Heaven" occurred after Michael and Satan battled for the right hand of God and Satan was told to kneel to Michael. Instead he fell to earth in the 1840's, along with many other demonic souls, through 1879. The demonic agenda is to make the soul trapped in limbo forever through the vaccinations, never to return to Earth again to fight Ahriman and Lucifer and claim Earth for all eternity. That's the Big Agenda Read this again, then READ IT AGAIN, and again so it sinks in about what the evil doers truly are doing to and with our children of this time.

"ELIMINATE THE SOUL WITH MEDICINE"

theorganizeearth More than a hundred years ago, Rudolf Steiner wrote the following:

"In the future, we will eliminate the soul with medicine. Under the pretext of a 'healthy point of view,' there will be a vaccine by which the human body will be treated as soon as possible directly at birth, so that the human being cannot develop the thought of the existence of soul and Spirit.

To materialistic doctors, will be entrusted the task of removing the soul of humanity. As today, people are vaccinated against this disease or that disease, so in the future, children will be vaccinated with a substance that can be produced precisely in such a way that people, thanks to this vaccination, will be immune to being subjected to the "madness" of spiritual life.

He would be extremely smart, but he would not develop a conscience, and that is the true goal of some materialistic circles.

With such a vaccine, you can easily make the etheric body loose in the physical body.

Once the etheric body is detached, the relationship between the universe and the etheric body would become extremely unstable, and man would become an automaton, for the physical body of man must be polished on this Earth by spiritual will.

So, the vaccine becomes a kind of arymanique force; man can no longer get rid of a given materialistic feeling. He becomes materialistic of constitution and can no longer rise to the spiritual."

-Rudolf Steiner (1861-1925)

Sadly, over 1/2 the world has been vaccinated with the experimental shot and NOT ONE person asked what was in the vaccine regarding ingredients. NOT ONE, for if they had they may have had to think twice about taken the inoculation. However, the new Covid vaccines are now found to contain magneto spike proteins (hence metal sticking to body parts).

The new ingredients being found in the covid and omicron vaccines are being found to contain deadly magneto spike proteins laced with a product developed at Universities like UC Davis, called "Hydra Vulgaris". These 'spike proteins' are laced with nano-sized razor blades that cut you from inside and you can bleed to death. This is why we are seeing so many athletes dying while playing sports and other illness' like elevated respiratory issues.

Hail Hydra; In the Vax, In the Water, In the Air

Celina Juliano, assistant professor in the UC Davis Department of Molecular and Cellular Biology, project scientist Stefan Siebert and colleagues including Jeff Farrell, a postdoctoral researcher at Harvard University, sequenced the RNA transcripts of 25,000 single hydra cells to follow the genetic trajectory of nearly all differentiated cell types. "The beauty of single-cell sequencing and why this is such a big deal for developmental biologists is that we can actually capture the genes that are expressed as cells differentiate from stem cells into their different cell types," Juliano said. Hydras continuously renew their cells from three different stem cell populations. The researchers analyzed sets of messenger RNA molecules, called transcriptomes, Stem cells form the foundational building blocks of an organism's body. During embryonic growth and development, stem cells differentiate, becoming various cells throughout the body. In many organisms, stem cells lose their ability to replace dysfunctional cells with age.

from individual hydra cells and grouped the cells based on their expressed genes. They could then build a decision tree showing how each lineage of stem cells gives rise to different cell types and tissues. For example, the interstitial stem cell lineage produces nerve cells, gland cells and the stinging cells in the animal's tentacles. "By building a decision tree for the interstitial lineage, we unexpectedly found evidence that the neuron and gland cell differentiation pathway share a common cell state," said Juliano. "Thus, interstitial stem cells appear to pass through a cell state that has both gland and neuron potential before making a final decision."

The "Immortal" Hydra

Eternal life. For humans, it's a fantasy pulled from science fiction, but for the Hydra (Hydra vulgaris), a small freshwater invertebrate, it's a reality. These organisms, which look like miniature, fleshy palm trees with swaying fronds of tentacles, boast stem cells that exist in a continuous state of renewal and seem to hold within their genomic code the key to biological immortality. Every 20 days, the whole organism renews itself.

“As far as we can tell, it doesn't age or die," says Assistant Professor Celina Juliano, Department of Molecular and Cellular Biology. "You can cut little pieces out of the animal and it will regrow and maybe the most amazing thing is that you can dissociate the animal into single cells, mix them all up, put them back in a ball and a new Hydra will just grow out of it."

Hydra are virtually immortal in a lab environment. Their unique abilities make them ideal for studies in healing and aging. Hydra regeneration was noted in 1744 by naturalist Abraham Trembley. Almost three centuries later, this animal's amazing capabilities remain a mystery.

Creations and Origins of Vaccines

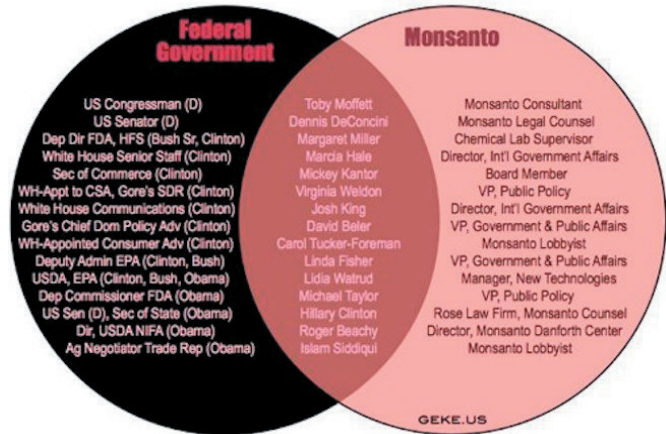

Vaccinations were created and invented by the Jesuit Order soldier, Francis Xavier, as a method to poison the Order’s enemies. Edward Jenner was a Jesuit and taught the medical world how to use the POISONED NEEDLE. He was the first to associate human diseases with that of animals. This made up idea paved the way for vaccinations of the masses which is responsible for the deaths of multiplied millions of people around the world today. Vaccines were created from the Vatican via Great Britain at the exact same time as Darwin’s “Evolution of Species” was released and the ridiculous Big Bang “THEORY” along with Globe Theory and a additional thousand years of made up his-story we are unwinding today.

They just made everything up. Vaccination and inoculation are often used interchangeably today. In the countryside in Gloustershire, England, where Dr. Jenner lived, the farmers had a legend or superstition that catching cowpox (a disease of cows which was transferred to the cows’ udders by unwashed or bleeding hands) would act like a charm or amulet to make them immune from catching the human disease of smallpox. Jesuit Jenner took this local legend or old wives' tale and turned it into a scientific FACT. He did this by first getting some scientific credentials (M.D., F.R.S. - Fellow of the Royal Society). Next, he wrote a book and on the title page only he used the term VARIOLAE VACCINAE. This means in Medieval Latin: smallpox of the cow. Thus, associating a human disease with a disease of the cow. There never was such a disease as smallpox of the cow until "Dr." Jenner invented it for the title of his book.

We then see the Euro White man's small pox plague brought to One America that exterminated large numbers of native brown skin populations using small pox blankets and vaccinations containing the Jesuit poisoned needle to eliminate the natives and take their lands since the 1500's. Over the past decades, at least seven high-ranking employees in the FDA have an employment history with the Monsanto Company who has since merged into Bayer pHARMeceuticals. At the forefront of this controversy is Michael R. Taylor, currently the deputy commissioner of the Office of Foods. He was also the deputy commissioner for Policy within the FDA in the mid '90s. However, between that position and his current FDA position, Mr. Taylor was employed by Monsanto as Vice President of Public Policy. The National Institutes of Health has a $30.5 billion annual budget on medical research. The Centers for Disease Control has a $11 billion annual budget on medical research but neither has found the time or money to do research on vaccinated vs. unvaccinated children's health.

A new peer-reviewed study comparing health outcomes of vaccinated and unvaccinated children, provisionally published in a journal of public health and assigned a DOI number (a digital object identifier given by publishers to identify content and provide a persistent link on the internet), found that completely unvaccinated children have less chronic disease and a lower risk of autism than vaccinated children. According to the abstract, the team of four scientists found that completely unvaccinated children were significantly more likely to get chickenpox and whooping cough but significantly less likely to suffer from ear infections, pneumonia, allergies, and brain or central nervous system disorders, including autism.

- Vaccinated children were more than twice as likely to have some chronic illness.
- Vaccinated children were nearly four times as likely to have learning disabilities, attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, and autism spectrum disorder.
- Vaccinated children who were born prematurely were more than six times more likely to have brain or central nervous system disorders, including autism

Dr. Robert Malone, immunologist, virologist, top researcher and inventor of the mRNA vaccine technology is speaking out to warn parents against Covid shots for children. Over 16,000 physicians and medical scientists around the world signed a declaration publicly declaring that healthy children should NOT be vaccinated for Covid.

Dr. Malone's statement in its entirety:

- My name is Robert Malone, and I am speaking to you as a parent, grandparent, physician and scientist. I don't usually read from a prepared speech, but this is so important that I wanted to make sure that I get every single word and scientific fact correct.
- I stand by this statement with a career dedicated to vaccine research and development. I'm vaccinated for COVID and I'm generally pro-vaccination. I have devoted my entire career to developing safe and effective ways to prevent and treat infectious diseases.
- Before you inject your child – a decision that is irreversible – I wanted to let you know the scientific facts about this genetic vaccine, which is based on the mRNA vaccine technology I created:

- One final point: the reason they're giving you to vaccinate your child is a lie.
- Your children represent no danger to their parents or grandparents
- It's actually the opposite. Their immunity, after getting COVID, is critical to save your family if not the world from this disease
- In summary: there is no benefit for your children or your family to be vaccinating your children against the small risks of the virus, given the known health risks of the vaccine that as a parent, you and your children may have to live with for the rest of their lives.

Med IS Sin

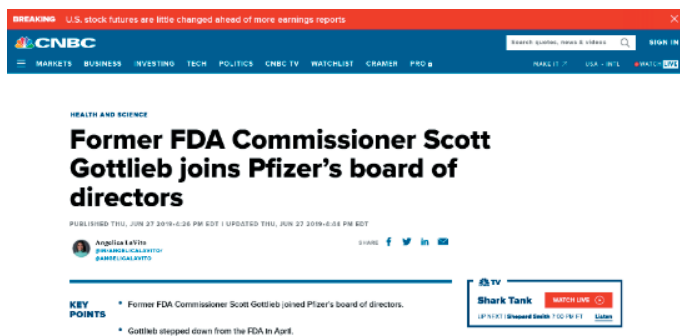

"No single person, including the President of the United States, should ever be given the power to make a medical decision for potentially millions of Americans. Freedom over one's physical person is the most basic freedom of all, and people in a free society should be sovereign over their own bodies. When we give government the power to make medical decisions for us, we in essence accept that the state owns our bodies." - Dr. Ron Paul

All Same Team; Big Harma and CIA Government Regulators

The Revolving Door: All 3 FDA-authorized COVID shot companies now employ former FDA commissioners

They have no recourse because it's the law. If there is a war on drugs, why is there a drug store on every corner? And why if tens, if not hundreds of billions, have been spent ending drug use have the governments failed so miserably, unless they want you, and all of us, sickly to "maximize shareholder value" for their corporate interests. They only care about net profit bottom lines, not a cure or even to get you well. A corporation's charter states its fiduciary responsibility is solely to its shareholders to maximize profit potential. As of 1988, vaccine makers and the doctors who administer vaccines as well as the government regulatory agencies bear no liability for vaccine injury. The tens of thousands that have died from the Covid vaxxines have no recourse for remedy. They cannot be held accountable by law for adverse events from vaccination. In fact, the entire adverse event reporting system (VAERS) is voluntary!

This means that the more aggressive our vaccine schedule, the more profitable it is for vaccine makers. The U.S. Government has guaranteed a thriving U.S. vaccine market for pharmaceutical companies by purchasing billions of dollars' worth of vaccines every year with U.S. taxpayer dollars. The CDC is the largest purchaser of vaccines in the U.S., spending over $4 billion annually to purchase vaccines that are approved by the FDA. Since the CDC is the government agency responsible for overseeing vaccine safety, this creates a huge conflict of interest. However, this is another U.S. Government agency purchasing billions of dollars' worth of vaccines. The Department of Homeland Security, created shortly after the terrorist attacks of September 2001, has been authorized by Congress to purchase and stockpile billions of dollars of experimental vaccines that are not approved by the FDA, to use on American citizens during a time of a "national emergency" as defined by the U.S. Government. This means guaranteed income for the Big pHARMya companies without any risk. What a great business model!

Western medicine is now socialized so doctors, with huge student loans of hundreds of thousands of dollars, must supplement their base incomes. The average income now for a pediatrician is $80,000 and even medical specialists are capped as to how much money they can make while most are still trying to pay back their student loans which often amounts to hundreds of thousands of dollars. During residency, before a doctorate degree is confirmed, soon to be doctors begin to make their 'rounds' yet retain little for they are also deprived sleep, "to see if they have what it takes". When they start their business "practice" (why are doctors always practicing) they don't remember treatment protocols so the Big Harma sends in perky, pretty drug sales reps to tell them what to prescribe and for what conditions. Doctors are trained only to take a pill, cut it out, or radiate. They don't get paid if everyone is healthy, yet in Ancient China, the physicians only got paid when their souls they cared for were healthy. When the souls got sick, the doctor was not paid. Doctors get perks from BigpHARMa, like trips to Bahamas and other fancy resorts for their allegiance and sales performance. Doctors are now required

Why Are Drug Reps Hot?

There is no such thing as a free lunch or an ugly drug rep. I was reminded of this several weeks ago as I Ashley and I sat in a waiting room at a local clinic. Most patients were half-heartedly eyeing archaic issues of Home & Garden or glancing at the Sanford and Sons reruns on TVLand. There was, however, a group that did not fit this mold. I counted three of them (two men and one woman) and heaven help me I couldn't spot a pimple or facial scar between them. The men were dressed in immaculate suits which served to compliment with their chiseled jaw lines and olive-skinned complexions. The lone woman was a tall blond dressed in a rather strategic dress and heels. All were armed with "business cases" and the knowledge that they were the only ones actually getting paid to sit in the waiting room.

to get a 63% vaccination rate in order to ‘earn’ their bonuses that can be up to $80,000 and more each year, that greatly supplements their income. Do no harm indeed! Medicare is now paying higher reimbursement rates for hospitals, physicians, pharmacies and others to administer the COVID-19 vaccine. Starting immediately, the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services is increasing the Medicare payment amount to $40 to administer each dose of a COVID-19 vaccine. This represents an increase from approximately $28 to $40 to administer a single dose, and an increase from approximately $45 to $80 for the administration of vaccines requiring two doses. The exact payment rate for administration of each dose of a COVID-19 vaccine will depend on the type of entity that furnishes the service and will be geographically adjusted based on where the service is furnished, CMS said.

Additionally, our western medicine system of take a pill, inject, cut it out and radiate does not promote or consider the age old practice of preventative care like eating healthy food, regular exercise and living in an around nature as additional ways to build up a child’s immune systems.

Please consider the following facts:
If you follow the Center for Disease Controls recommended vaccination schedule, your children will receive 49 doses of 14 vaccines by the time he or she is 6 years of age. By the age of 18, the CDC recommends that children have gotten a whopping total of 69 doses of 16 vaccines.

Vaccine companies over the last 16 years have outperformed all other medical companies in annualized profits with a stellar return of 32% annually unmatched in any other industry as well. Additionally, our western medicine system of take a pill, inject, cut it out and radiate does not promote or consider the age old practice of preventative care like eating healthy food, regular exercise and living in an around nature as additional ways to build up a child's immune systems. In addition, over 80% of physical illness' are caused by emotional trauma and stress, yet western med-is-sin does not even address emotions during diagnosis' ...just blood tests and such. A patient cured, is profit lost, bottom line as all designed by Rockefeller medicine who founded the medical education system back in the 1920's. The U.S. ranks second in health care cost per capita ($8,608). Only to be outspent by Switzerland ($9,121) which ranks in the top 10 in healthcare system efficiency). The National Childhood Vaccine Injury Act of 1986 was passed by Congress to protect vaccine manufacturers and vaccine providers from liability for vaccine injuries and deaths in civil court. If a child is injured by a government recommended or mandated vaccine, the child must sue the Secretary of Health for damages under the Act in the U.S. Court of Claims in Washington, D.C. If the vaccine injured child is turned down for federal compensation or offered too little to provide for the child's lifetime care, a lawsuit may be filed in civil court against a vaccine manufacturer or negligent doctor with certain restrictions. Over $3 billion has been awarded to vaccine victims for brain inflammation and immune system damage leading to permanent injury or death, even though two out of three children are turned away for federal compensation.

Operation "Dark Winter" ~ Small Pox Breakout Exercises June 21-23, 2001

On June 22-23, 2001, the Center for Strategic and International Studies, the Johns Hopkins Center for Civilian Biodefense Studies, the ANSER Institute for Homeland Security, and the Oklahoma City National Memorial Institute for the Prevention Terrorism, hosted a senior-level war game examining the national security, intergovernmental, and information challenges of a biological attack on the American homeland. With tensions rising in the Taiwan Straits, and a major crisis developing in Southwest Asia, a smallpox outbreak was confirmed by the CDC in Oklahoma City.

During the thirteen days of the game, the disease spread to 25 states and 15 other countries. Fourteen participants and 60 observers witnessed terrorism/warfare in slow motion. Discussions, debates (some rather heated), and decisions focused on the public health response, lack of an adequate supply of smallpox vaccine, roles and missions of federal and state governments, civil liberties associated with quarantine and isolation, the role of DoD, and potential military responses to the anonymous attack. Additionally, a predictable 24/7 news cycle quickly developed that focused the nation and the world on the attack and response. Five representatives from the national press corps (including print and broadcast) participated in the game and conducted a lengthy press conference with the President.

The players were introduced to this crisis during a National Security Council meeting scheduled to address several emerging crises, including the deployment of a carrier task force to the Middle East. At the start of the meeting, the Director of Health and Human Services informed the President of a confirmed case of smallpox in Oklahoma City. Additional smallpox cases were soon identified in Georgia and Pennsylvania. More cases were reported in Oklahoma. The source of the infection was unknown, and exposure was presumed to have taken place at least nine days earlier due to the lengthy incubation period of smallpox. Consequently, exposed individuals had likely traveled far from the loci of what was now presumed to be a biological attack. The scenario spanned 13 days.

The PlannedDemic “Drills” ~ Event 201 October 2019

Event 201 was a 3.5-hour pandemic tabletop exercise that simulated a series of dramatic, scenario-based facilitated discussions, confronting difficult, true-to-life dilemmas associated with response to a hypothetical, but scientifically plausible, pandemic. 15 global business, government, and public health leaders were players in the simulation exercise that highlighted unresolved real-world policy and economic issues that could be solved with sufficient political will, financial investment, and attention now and in the future. The exercise consisted of pre-recorded news broadcasts, live “staff” briefings, and moderated discussions on specific topics. These issues were carefully designed in a compelling narrative that educated the participants and the audience.

Death by Vax, The Proof

Pfizer’s document is titled “Cumulative Analysis of Post-authorization Adverse Event Reports of PF-07302048 (BNT162B2) received through 28-Feb-2021”. As the title indicates, the document contains information about adverse events that occurred following vaccination. The document doesn’t disclose the total number of people who had received the vaccine at the time the document was published. From the emergency authorization of the vaccine on 1 December 2020 through 28 February 2021, Pfizer collected a total of 42,086 adverse event reports. Sources included spontaneous reports to Pfizer, cases published in the medical literature or collected from studies, Pfizer-sponsored marketing programs, and adverse event reports from the health authorities of 63 countries. Around 65% of the reports came from the U.S. (13,739) and the U.K. (13,404), mainly through surveillance systems like the U.S.

Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS) and the U.K. Yellow Card Scheme. The FDA release was a response to a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request by the group Public Health and Medical Professionals for Transparency filed in September 2021, demanding the data that Pfizer submitted to the FDA as part of the license application. Some of the members of this group, which comprises mainly academics and physicians, have previously spread misinformation about COVID-19 vaccine safety. Pfizer wanted you to wait till 2085 to know that the vaccine you took has 9 PAGES of side effects.

It is tragically obvious why the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) wanted a ridiculous window of 75 years to release all the Pfizer vaccine data. Conveniently, most of the people affected by the questionable jab would be dead by then. Thankfully, US

District Judge Mark Pittman of the Northern District of Texas believed the release of this data to be “paramount to public importance,” and required the FDA to release around 12,000 documents immediately, and then 55,000 pages a month until all documents are released. This shortens the full release of all pertinent data to around eight months.

Doctor warns that COVID jabs can forever alter DNA, cause serious reactions in children

Dr. Daniel Nagass said children are especially susceptible to having their DNA altered, since they have higher levels of reverse transcriptase than adults.

(LifeSiteNews) – A Canadian doctor warned against giving Ivermectin to COVID-19 patients and is warning that mRNA COVID jabs can permanently alter DNA and cause cells to churn out “toxic” spike proteins “forever,” especially in children.

Dr. Daniel Nagass explained the mechanisms behind the dangers of the mRNA jabs during a discussion of Pfizer’s released jab trial data that showed at least a 30% adverse reaction rate to the shots “with no recovery,” including deaths, which accounted for 3% of jabbed trial participants, although they “were directly attributable to Pfizer’s COVID-19 injections.”

After nearly a year of being pestered, shamed, coerced and guilted into receiving one of the COVID-19 vaccines, Joe Biden on Jan. 4, had the nerve to say there is “no excuse for anyone being unvaccinated.” With the proof in black and white from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration itself, we actually have 1,291 “excuses” to remain unvaccinated! Again, those in power, those who control the CDC/FDA/USA INC/ etc. want you dead and want your soul to remain in forever limbo. The first adverse event on the list is a chromosome disorder called 1p36 deletion syndrome. The definition is as follows: A chromosome disorder is a change in chromosome number or structure which results in a set of features or symptoms. People with 1p36 deletion syndrome have lost a small but variable amount of genetic material from one of their 46 chromosomes.

Remember when all those conspiracy theorists were posting their concerns that the new mRNA technology could change one’s DNA? And then all the “fact-checkers” were working overtime to label those dangerous posts as misinformation? But all the while, the FDA knew that this syndrome was a possible side effect of the vaccine.

The list of hard-to-pronounce adverse events is presented in alphabetical order. A few I picked out that sounded familiar are arterial thrombosis, autoimmune endocrine disorder, cardiopulmonary failure, central nervous system lupus, colitis ulcerative, early infantile epileptic encephalopathy, multiple sclerosis, myocarditis, rheumatoid arthritis, testicular autoimmunity, and vagus nerve paralysis. The events were classified as either serious or non-serious, however only serious cases were included in the report. There were over 22,000 serious general disorders reported, 14,000 serious nervous system disturbances, 8,000 serious musculoskeletal and connective tissue disorders and 7,000 serious gastrointestinal disorders. The words autoimmune and thrombosis showed up a lot on the list. There were 270 “spontaneous abortions.” There were even 1,300 different health diagnoses, let alone nearly 1,300 potential side effects for one vaccine. And the only word we ever heard them utter, was “safe.” How is everyone involved still walking around freely? There were also over 1,200 deaths reported in those first three months. Whether every death was undeniably caused by the vaccine, we will probably never know. But the possibility absolutely should have been disclosed.

Informed consent was criminally absent. And even more sickening is that not one governing body has the integrity to be responsible. Not one honorable person or entity has the decency to say, “the buck stops here.” This is a heinous crime against all, especially the children who rely on their parents to make the healthy decisions for their well being. In the Pfizer vaccine trial, eight people out of 18,198 people in the vaccinated group contracted COVID. And 162 out of 18,325 people in the unvaccinated contracted COVID. So, the risk of getting COVID if you were unvaccinated was .88 percent, and the risk if you were vaccinated was .04 percent. So, the published 95 percent refers to the relative difference between .88 percent and .04 percent. This reveals that the Absolute Risk Reduction for contracting COVID after receiving the vaccine, was less than 1 percent.

KEY POINTS

- Ginkgo Bioworks will make its market debut by merging with Soaring Eagle Acquisition Corp., the blank-check company led by former MGM CEO Harry Sloan.
- The SPAC has attracted institutional investors including Cathie Wood of Ark Invest and values the biotech company at $15 billion, triple its last private valuation.
- The deal would be one of the largest SPAC mergers to date and Sloan's SPAC is led by executives of the same blank-check company that brought DraftKings and Skillz to the stock market last year.

By design, the pool testing does not identify which individual(s) tested positive for the #faux Covid. SO, all will need to be put into Quarantine at the school’s alone discretion.

Interim Operational Considerations for Implementing the Shielding Approach to Prevent COVID-19 Infections in Humanitarian Settings

This document presents considerations from the perspective of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control & Prevention (CDC) for implementing the shielding approach in humanitarian settings as outlined in guidance documents that address on-site, displaced populations and low-resource settings. This approach has never been documented and has raised questions and concerns among humanitarian partners who support response activities in these settings. The purpose of this document is to highlight practical implementation challenges of the shielding approach from CDC perspective and guide thinking around implementation in the absence of empirical data. Considerations are based on current evidence known about the transmission and severity of coronavirus disease 2019 (COVID-19) and may need to be revised as more information becomes available. Please check the CDC website periodically for updates.

The CRISPR revolution

CRISPR gene editing might be the single most important biological discovery of this century. It took many brilliant minds and years of experimentation to coalesce into a discovery that transformed the way we approach biology. With this powerful tool in hand, scientists today are making tomorrow's history.

CRISPR editing provides a clever method to introduce precise DNA changes at specified genomic locations, allowing researchers to modify virtually any coding or non-coding region of the genome. Learn more about the history of CRISPR technology development and how CRISPR editing works.

On October 6, 2021, analyst Scorpion Capital published an investigative report concluding "Ginkgo is a house of cards - in our opinion, one of the most brazen frauds of the last 20 years." The report indicated that Ginkgo's business model is a related-party model whereby essentially 100% of the company's deferred revenue are derived from related-party "customers" it created, funded, controls or influences via its ownership position and board seats. Scorpion also alleged that Ginkgo has engaged in a brazen effort to misclassify and misreport related-party revenue and deceive investors with phony accounting and at least half of Ginkgo's reported foundry revenue is phantom, non-cash and "pure accounting hocus-pocus."

Following this news, Ginkgo's stock price fell $1.39, or approximately 12%, to close at $10.59 per share on October 6, 2021.

Recently, on November 15, 2021, Ginkgo admitted that shortly after the issuance of the Scorpion Capital report, the company received an inquiry from the United States Department of Justice relating to the financial misconduct allegations in the report.

The Cure is the Disease ~ Inventing AIDS

On May 11, 1987, the London Times published an explosive article titled "Smallpox vaccine causes the AIDS virus." It has been suggested that the smallpox vaccination program promoted by WHO is responsible for the spread of AIDS in Africa. Almost 100 million Africans living in Central Africa have been vaccinated by the World Health Organization. The vaccine was blamed for awakening the "dormant" infection of the AIDS virus on the continent. The WHO consultant confessed: "Now I believe that the theory of the smallpox vaccine explains the explosion of (the incidence of) AIDS".

Dr. Robert Gallo, one of the discoverers of HIV, told the Times: "The link between the WHO program and the epidemic is an interesting and important hypothesis."

Dr. Richard Strohman, Emeritus Professor of Cell Biology at the University of California at Berkeley: "In the old days it was required that a scientist address the possibilities of proving his hypothesis wrong as well as right. Now there's none of that in standard HIV-AIDS program with all its billions of dollars." (Penthouse April 1994) Dr. Harvey Bialy, Molecular Biologist, former editor of Bio/Technology and Nature Biotechnology: Harvey Bialy "HIV is an ordinary retrovirus. There is nothing about this virus that is unique. Everything that is discovered about HIV has an analogue in other retroviruses that don't cause AIDS. HIV only contains a very small piece of genetic information. There's no way it can do all these elaborate things they say it does." (Spin June 1992)

Dr. Roger Cunningham, Immunologist, Microbiologist and Director of the Centre for Immunology at the State University of New York at Buffalo: "Unfortunately, an AIDS 'establishment' seems to have formed that intends to discourage challenges to the dogma on one side and often insists on following discredited ideas on the other." (Sunday Times (London) 3 April 1994)

Smallpox vaccine 'triggered Aids virus'

By Pearce Wright
Science Editor

The Aids epidemic may have been triggered by the mass vaccination campaign which eradicated smallpox.

The World Health Organisation, which spearheaded the 1970s campaign, is studying new scientific evidence suggesting that immunisation with the smallpox vaccine Vaccinia awakened the unsuspected, dormant human immune-deficient virus infection (HIV).

Some experts fear that in obtaining one dose of another disease, many children from a major endemic illness of the Third World into the current pandemic.

While doctors now accept that Vaccinia can activate other viruses, they are divided about whether it was the main catalyst to the Aids epidemic.

But an adviser to WHO who disclosed the problem, told The Times: "I thought it was just a coincidence until we studied the latest findings about the reasons which can be caused by Vaccinia. Now I believe the smallpox vaccine theory is the explanation to the explosion of Aids."

Further evidence comes from the Walter Reed Army Medical Centre in Washington.

While smallpox vaccine is no longer kept for public health purposes, new recruits to the American Armed services are immunised as a precaution against possible biological warfare. Routine vaccination of a 19-year-old recruit was the trigger for stimulation of dormant HIV virus into Aids.

This discovery of how people with sub-clinical HIV infection are at risk of rapid development of Aids as a vaccine-induced disease was made by a medical team working with Dr Robert Redfield at Walter Reed.

The recruit who developed Aids after vaccination had been healthy throughout high school. He was given multiple immunisations, followed by his first smallpox vaccination.

Two and a half weeks later he developed fever, headache, neck stiffness and night sweats. Three weeks later he was admitted to Walter Reed suffering from meningitis and rapidly developed further symptoms of Aids, and died after responding for a short time to treatment.

Aids epidemic 'triggered by smallpox vaccine'

modified versions of the smallpox vaccine to combat other diseases in developing countries.

Other doctors who accept the connection between the anti-smallpox campaign and the Aids epidemic now see answers to questions which had baffled them. Slow, for instance, the Aids organism, previously regarded by scientists as "weak, slow and vulnerable", began to behave like a type capable of creating a plague.

Many experts are reluctant to support the theory publicly because they believe it would be interpreted unfairly as criticism of WHO.

In addition, they are concerned about the impact on other public health campaigns with vaccines such as against diphtheria and the continued use of Vaccinia in potential Aids research.

The coincidence between the anti-smallpox campaign and the rise of Aids was discussed privately last year by experts at WHO. The possibility was dismissed on grounds of unsatisfactory evidence.

Advisors to the organization believed then that too much attention was being focused on Aids by the media. It is now felt that doubts would have risen sooner if public health authorities in Africa had more willingly reported infection resistance to WHO.

Instead, some African countries continued to ignore the existence of Aids even after US doctors alerted the world when the infection spread to the United States.

However, as epidemiologists gleaned more information about Aids from reluctant Central African countries, clues began to emerge from the new findings when examined against the wealth of vital known about smallpox as recorded in the Final Report of the Global Commission for the Certification of Smallpox Eradication.

The smallpox vaccine theory would account for the position of each of the seven Central African states which top the league table of most-affected countries, why Brazil became the most afflicted Latin American country, and how HIV became the route for the spread of Aids to the US.

Normal blood supply between main and branch in Africa

There is less sign of infection among five to six-year-olds in Central Africa.

Needles were reused 40 to 60 times in the vaccination campaign. Wiping the needle across a flame was the main, but perhaps not totally satisfactory method, of sterilisation.

Although no detailed figures are available, WHO information indicated that the Aids league table of Central Africa matches the concentration of vaccinations.

Dr. Gordon Stewart, Emeritus Professor of Public Health, University of Glasgow: Prof. Gordon Stewart "AIDS is a behavioural disease. It is multifactorial, brought on by several simultaneous strains on the immune system - drugs, pharmaceutical and recreational, sexually transmitted diseases, multiple viral infections." (Spin June 1992)

When the Euro White invaders arrived in One America, they carried with them deadly disease to the natives, who had no immunity to the deadly plagues that were unleashed upon the white man's arrival. The indigenous people of the Americas were effectively doomed. They had never experienced smallpox, measles or flu before and the viruses tore through One America killing an estimated 90% of Native Americans.

Smallpox is believed to have arrived in the Americas in 1520 on a Spanish ship sailing from Cuba. As soon as the party landed in Mexico, the infections began their deadly voyage through the continent. A 1713 smallpox epidemic in the Cape of Good Hope decimated the South African Khoi San people, rendering them incapable of resisting the process of colonization". European Whites germs also wreaked devastation on the aboriginal communities of Australia and New Zealand. More victims of colonization were killed by Eurasian germs than by either the gun or the sword, we see time and again in his-story. Win the war before a battle even begins. Within just a few generations, the continent of One American of brown skins were 'emptied' of their native inhabitants. Estimates are that approximately 20 million people may have died in the years following the European invasion of One America.

"No medieval force, no matter how bloodthirsty, could have achieved such enormous levels of genocide".

Euro White invading Americano's were aided by a deadly secret weapon created by the Jesuits in the 18 th century a man-made 'vaccines' containing Smallpox. They also inoculated blankets with the deadly virus and gave it to the natives as well to help spread the disease in a mass 'soft kill' as you will read about a little further on. It is estimated that during the initial Spanish conquest after Columbus 'discovered' America, that on the West Coast alone, up to eight million indigenous people died, most by white man induced diseases.

The taking of Alta California can be mapped out through many diseases brought over by the white man, including vaccinations! Smallpox, Cholera, Scarlet Fever, Thyphoid Fever and Malaria, to name a few. The Jesuits founded the vaccine 'cure' back in the 1600's. Dr. Jenner created it from a cow pox vaccine he created, hence 'vaca' or cow. As Euro White invaders entered their so called "New World", their diseases rapidly and greatly infected the native people, who had no previous exposure or immunity to the Euro White manmade and carried created diseases.

Death by Blankets and Vaccines

The Nessus Shirt of Heracles

According to myth, Heracles shot the centaur Nessus with an arrow poisoned with the blood of the Hydra, as Nessus was abducting Heracles's wife Deianeira. The dying centaur advised Deianeira to collect blood from his wound (or to take his blood-soaked tunic) and save it in an airtight container. If Heracles ever strayed, he claimed, she could win him back by imbuing clothing with the substance as a love charm. When Heracles took a younger wife years later, Deianeira reluctantly anointed a tunic, locked it in a chest, and sent it to Heracles, instructing that no one should touch it but her husband. After the messenger left, Deianeira was horrified to notice that a bit of the treated wool had fallen on the courtyard, where it immediately incinerated the stones. Meanwhile, Heracles proudly donned the new robe to perform a special sacrifice. As soon as the material became warm, profuse sweat broke out and the poison began to corrode his skin, eating into his flesh as his blood "hissed and bubbled" (Motif F1041.5. poison of Hydra corrodes skin). Roaring and running in agony, Heracles tries to rip off the garment, but it clings so that flesh tears away with it. Looking at his ravaged body, he despairs of his lost beauty and strength and resolves to die. One tradition says that the robe caused Heracles such torment that he plunged into a stream, but the poison only burned more fiercely. Other versions say that Heracles, racked by "the hidden pestilence," threw himself on a flaming pyre at Mount Oeta and was burned alive. Deianeira killed herself in remorse. Sophocles based his tragedy The Trachinian Women (440-420 B.C.) on popular legends of Heracles's demise. Since antiquity, the

In the old days blankets infected with smallpox were given to the tribes in an effort to decimate them. [Deloria 1970:54]

The conquest of Mexico was accomplished by a “handful of Spaniards and one Negro with smallpox” whose bedding was given to natives. [Washburn 1975:105; cf. Hopkins 1983:206 and Stearn and Stearn 1945:18]

The U.S. Army sent contaminated blankets to Native Americans [to] control the Indian problem. [Ramenofsky 1987:146–148]

Some colonists . . . deliberately fostered smallpox’s spread [to] break the Indians’ resistance and facilitate European settlement. [Hopkins 1983:236]

The U.S. government distributed smallpox blankets to Native Americans through frontier trading posts run by the Army—a deliberate, carefully planned, massive genocide. [Kevin T. Keith, Washington, D.C., alt.folklore.urban, 8 March 1994]

I begin with the notorious incident, long a staple in United States history books, in which the British commander Amherst ordered his men to infect Indians by presenting them with blankets used by smallpox victims. This event of 1763 reifies the disturbing idea, widespread in folklore, that a gift of clothing could be a murder weapon. But the notion of deliberate poisoning of natives by Europeans predated the Amherst incident; such stories began to surface with the earliest arrival of Europeans in the Americas. New blanket stories continued to emerge in the 19th and 20th centuries as settlers pushed West, and versions still circulate today among whites, Native Americans, and Blacks. Next, to understand how the smallpox blanket came to become the weapon of the Native

From 1633-1635 French Jesuit missionaries tell the native Huron tribes that if they are baptized and convert to Christianity, they will be spared the disease. Among those who refuse, they provided to them smallpox-laden blankets. More than 10,000 Huron natives died from smallpox. There were smallpox epidemics, from 1800-1801, 1824, 1830, 1836, 1853, and 1863. This coincides exactly with the arrival of the Europeans. As soon as Euro-White Americanos arrived and began to take over Alta California the death by plandemic increased. Native populations across the over 70 tribes of Alta California were affected by smallpox, measles and other infectious diseases that were common across Asia, Europe, and Africa.

First Vaxxines in California: It is said that the first disease of smallpox was brought down from Alaska by a US/Russia business venture in fur hunting that is traced to the settlement of Fort Ross in 1821.

- 2) Did they have International laws between nations back then?

Russia Orders U.S.-Built Warships

Impressed by U.S. shipyards, Russia contracted New York shipbuilders to build warships for the Russian navy, including the largest ship ever built in the U.S. at the time, the 60-gun heavy frigate General-Admiral.

The first vaccination in California history was carried out by the crew of the Kutuzov, a Russian-American Company vessel arriving from Callao, Peru which brought vaccine to Monterey in August 1821, so the story goes. The Kutuzov's surgeon vaccinated 54 persons.

The smallpox outbreak of 1828 was introduced again by US, Russian and British fur trading interests, then spread all the way up to Sitka, Alaska in 1837 in the capital of Russian America. It is reported that the disease likely arrived on a ship from across the Pacific. (Did you even know there was a capital called "Russian America?")

What followed fits a pattern that has been noted since Jesuits created their poisoned needle 'remedy'. Epidemics begin to spread in more and more ports of entry. Within just a single year, it had reached hundreds of miles north over much of modern-day Alaska and south into British territory around Puget Sound. Whatever efforts the Russians, British or US forces made to stop the mass spread were not successful in containing it.

By then, California missions had been disbanded by the Mexican government. General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo had taken possession of the Sonoma mission property and established a military presence. In late 1837, before the virus was even detected, he sent a cavalry unit, led by corporal Ignacio Miramontes and accompanied by natives, to Fort Ross to bring back supplies for the troops at Sonoma. Thus, he and his troops, carried the disease back to Sonoma and Napa counties. The disease was said to spread rapidly. Though we are told/sold that General Vallejo practiced “social distancing” by relocating his native laborers to a place a mile and a half away, they still perished “by the hundreds.” From there, smallpox cut a wide swath through the North Bay to Clear Lake and beyond. It was a terrifying time. Hoping for a cure, many natives entered their sweathouses and then plunged into cold water. But it was no use. Whole villages were struck down without a single survivor.

For years after, the bones of thousands “often left unburied, bleached the hills” of Sonoma and Napa counties. Chief Solano, Vallejo’s friend, estimated that his tribe, which had numbered in many thousands, was reduced to just 200 survivors. The death toll may have exceeded 90%, on par with other places in the Americas. The epidemic in the North Bay continued into 1839. Pattie’s efforts 10 years earlier seem to have given some protection to those tribes to the south. 152 The Incredible Story of the Founding of California by Genocide on Its Native People Smallpox had never before occurred in the west. The disease was said to have spread among the natives along the banks of the lower Columbia River near Portland, Oregon and all the way down to the crescent central valley of California. In the course of just one year, 1833, the same disease of smallpox showed up and spread throughout hundreds of tribes. This made conquest of desired lands much easier.

“Black Maria” Hits Los Angeles 1862

“The city’s smallpox wagon, dubbed the ‘black Maria,’ was a frequent and disheartening sight as it rolled through the streets carrying victims to the city hospital or ‘pesthouse’, writes John W. Robinson in Los Angeles in Civil War Days 1860-1865.

So the story goes...Southern California was already reeling in the winter of 1862. A drought had decimated the cattle business, plunging the region into economic distress. When the first cases of smallpox cropped up in late 1862, they were concentrated in California's Native community. By mid-January of 1863, the disease had spread across racial and socio-economic barriers, killing 14 Angelenos in a single day. Undertakers were overwhelmed and local government, underfunded. 'Fortunately', doctors had a powerful tool in their arsenal since English doctor Edward James had developed the first smallpox vaccine in 1796. The vaccine was available to all residents, regardless of race or socio-economic class, although it often had to be administered more than once to be effective.

In 1863, the city hired health inspectors to identify cases and impose quarantine. In effect, they were 19th Century contact tracers. The city also offered a free vaccination program. Yet the availability of medical treatment, nursing care and even the enforcement of quarantine regulations depended on one's class status. Those who had family members to care for them and could afford to pay private physician's fees, were treated at home. Those who did not, went to the quarantine hospital, or 'pest houses' to treat the pestilence plaguing LA.

Infected premises were affixed with a yellow flag and quarantined. During the height of the epidemic, nearly every house in Sonora-town [L.A.'s poorest Mexican American neighborhood] flew the dreaded flag. By early February, there were 278 cases in town, and more than a hundred lay in their graves. Southern California was already reeling in the winter of 1862. A drought had decimated the cattle business, plunging the region into economic distress.

When the first cases of smallpox cropped up in late 1862, they were concentrated in California's Native community. By mid-January of 1863, the disease had spread across racial and socio-economic barriers, killing 14 Angelenos in a single day. Undertakers were overwhelmed and local government, underfunded. As the bleak winter of 1862 dragged on into 1863, the isolated, ramshackle town of Los Angeles was visited by a terrifying scourge -- smallpox. With its telltale fever and disfiguring skin rash, the highly infectious disease jumped from adobe to adobe, killing more than 100 people and sickening hundreds of others. If those numbers don't sound like much, remember L.A. had only 4,000 souls at the time and the outbreak that wiped out half of its indigenous residents. The city’s smallpox wagon, dubbed the “black Maria”, was a frequent and disheartening sight as it rolled through the streets carrying victims to the city hospital.

This smallpox outbreak would be the deadliest in American his-story yet Los Angeles wasn’t the only city that suffer the plandemics by smallpox. Historian Kristine Gunnell says L.A. would go on to weather several more smallpox epidemics during the 19th century -- including 1868 to 1869, 1877, 1884 and 1887.

Those not killed were put on US government designated reservations sometimes hundreds of miles from their family tribal lands that they kept in fecundity and abundance in harmony with Nature and their legends, cultures, history of their peoples and ways buried along with the original Ancient Americans. Native brown skins population in 1845 said to be 150,00 and just three years later, was down to 24,000. The plannedemic in the North Bay continued into 1839. The population of Native Californio’s were reduced by 90% from the mid 1849 to 1852 alone. (3nd column :Indigenous California Indians)

July 2019 SACRAMENTO – Governor Gavin Newsom today issued an apology through executive order on behalf of California to California Native American Peoples for the many instances of violence, mistreatment and neglect inflicted upon California Native Americans throughout the state's history. The Governor also announced the creation of a Truth and Healing Council to provide an avenue for California Native Americans to clarify the record – and provide their historical perspective – on the troubled relationship between tribes and the state. This is the first time a state has taken dual action to correct the historical record and acknowledge wrong-doing through executive order mandate and a tribally-led, consultation-informed council.

"It's called a genocide. That's what it was. A genocide. There's no other way to describe it and that's the way it needs to be described in the history books," Newsom said. "And so I'm here to say the following: I'm sorry on behalf of the state of California".

Peter Burnett, as one of his first acts as the very first Governor of California in 1851, openly called for "the extermination of the Indian tribes", and in reference to the relentless attacks and violence against California's Native

Mexican Californio brown skinned people. "That a war of extermination will continue to be waged between the races until the Indian race becomes extinct must be expected. While we cannot anticipate this result but with painful regret, the inevitable destiny of the race is beyond the power or wisdom of man to avert."

Peter Hardeman Burnett, was a principal founder of Sacramento and a former slaveholder from Tennessee with a burning passion to create a whites-only American West. In 1843, Burnett led a wagon train to Oregon. He was (s)elected to the legislature where he took the lead in passing law that excluded all Native Brown Native Americans from the state! The law allowed whites to keep the newly captured 'slaves' for three years, after which they would be freed and required to leave the state. Any native Mexican Californio person who refused to leave would be whipped, earning the beatings the nickname of "Peter Hardeman Burnett's Lash Law." It was rescinded, though other brown skinned exclusionary laws were later passed.

Here is his 1st State of the CA Union Speech as Governor Peter Burnett:

"Twenty months ago, California was inhabited by a sparse population - a pastoral people - deriving their main sustenance from their flocks and herds, and a scanty cultivation of the soil; their trade and business limited, and their principal exports consisting of hides and tallow.

Within that short period has been made the discovery of the rich, extensive, and exhaustless gold mines of California; and how great have already been its effects! The trade and business of the country have been revolutionized and reversed - the population increased beyond all expectation - commerce extended - our ports filled with shipping from every nation and clime - our commercial cities have sprung up as if by enchantment - our beautiful bays and placid streams now navigated by the power of the energetic, intrepid, and sensible people of California have formed a Constitution for our new State".

In 1848, Burnett followed tales of gold to California where he befriended John Sutter Jr. and helped him found Sacramento. Burnett helped fuel the continued enslavement and genocide of California's indigenous people. He signed the perversely-named "Act for the Government and Protection of Indians in 1852". This law enabled whites to force Native people from their lands into indentured servitude or be killed or be put on Euro-White Americano's designated reservations.

The Act for the Government and Protection of Indians on April 22, 1850 passed by the legislature of California, it allowed settlers to continue to the Californio practice of capturing and using Native people as forced workers. It also provided the basis for the enslavement and trafficking in Native American Native labor, particularly that of young women and children, which was carried on as a legal business enterprise. Raids on villages were made to supply the demand, the young women and children were carried off to be sold, the men and remaining people often being killed. This practice did much to destroy Native Copper head brown skinned Californio tribes during the California Gold Rush.

Governor Burnett later became a California Supreme Court Justice. While Burnett's vision of an exclusively white West fit within broader white supremacist policies of the time. Freemason, William B. Almond, a close friend of Burnett, was an organizer and was first Master of San Jose Lodge No 10. Though I can find no evidence of Mr. Burnett being a member of the Freemasons, it is public knowledge that at least 19 governors have belonged to the Secret Brotherhood of Freemasons, as were many of the robber barons of the California gold rush of 1849, as you will read about further in this book.

The U.S. government sponsored and led over 162 massacres of California natives in just over two decades to rid the natives so they could take the wealth from the lands and occupy Alta California for their own. Just one example was the "Bloody Island Massacre" in Lake County in Northern California of the Pomo natives. The Pomo were known as one the most peaceful tribes of over 76 tribes that existed before the Great Extermination took place. The Pomo were forced to live in small rancherias set aside by the federal government. For most of the 20th century, the Pomo, reduced in number, survived on such tiny reservations in poverty. School textbooks on California history do not mention anything about these massacres that allowed the Euro White Americano's to take over all of Alta California 'by any means'.

A number of Pomo, primarily members living in the Big Valley area of Northern California, had been enslaved, interned, and severely abused by settlers like Andrew Kelsey (namesake of Kelsey Creek and Kelseyville, California) and Charles Stone. They captured and forced local Pomo to work as vaqueros (cowboys). They also forced them to build them residences for the Euro-White invaders. Because they made a residence there, their treatment of the Pomo was more brutal. The people were eventually confined to a village surrounded by a stockade and were not allowed weapons or fishing implements. Families starved on the meager rations they provided, only four cups of wheat a day for a family. When one young man asked for more wheat for his sick mother, Stone killed him.

In the fall of 1849, Kelsey forced 50 Pomo men to work as laborers on a second gold-seeking expedition to the Placer gold fields. Kelsey became ill with malaria and sold the rations to other miners. The Pomo starved, and only one or two men returned alive. Stone and Kelsey regularly forced the Pomo parents to bring their daughters to them to be sexually abused. If they refused, they were whipped mercilessly. A number of them died from that abuse. Both men indentured and abused the Pomo women. The starving Pomo became so desperate that they were forced to raid the invaders livestock for food to eat. His-story would say the 'savages' attacked the 'new settlers' in their narratives.

His-story tells of the natives being 'savages' and 'scalpers', yet the opposite was true. The California government actually doled out bounties for each native brown skinned killed and with proof of scalp would get several hundred dollars in payment, PLUS get the lands of those native's lands for their own! This is one of the big reasons so many came and made the treacherous journey as the "new settlers" to California. Free land once it was cleared of the natives who had lived in peace for thousands of years.

In a letter to President Zachary Taylor, Presbyterian preacher Sylvester Woodbridge Jr. detailed the Native people's plight:

'The Indians in the Sierra Nevada are driven in large numbers from their usual haunts, and are consequently deprived of their customary food- acorns, and hence are exposed to starvation...they are often killed, because when urged by hunger, they have attempted to seize the horses or cattle of American emigrants'.

The his-story goes that Freemason, John Marshall, discovered gold in January of 1848 at Sutter's Mill in the Sierra Foothills of Northern California. Sutters Mill was located also at Sutters Fort, a US government sponsored effort, like the other forts put up and down the West Coast. The site of the fort was established in 1839 and originally called New Helvetia (New Switzerland) by its builder John Sutter, though construction of the fort proper wouldn't begin until 1841. Many of the 'new settlers' were said to have traveled from Switzerland, home of the Rothschilds.

The fort was the first non-Mexican-Californio community in the California Central Valley. The fort is famous for its association with the Donner Party, the California Gold Rush, and the formation of the city of Sacramento, surrounding the fort and all aided and abetted by Freemasons. Holy Roman Empire born John Augustus Sutter had to go to the capital at Monterey to obtain permission from the governor, Juan Bautista Alvarado, to 'settle' in the territory. Alvarado saw Sutter's plan of establishing a colony in Central Valley as useful in "buttressing the frontier which he was trying to maintain against the Russians, Americans and British colonizers", so we are told/sold.

Sutter persuaded Governor Alvarado to grant him 48,400 acres of land for the sake of curtailing American encroachment on the Mexican territory of California. Sutter was given the right to "represent in the Establishment of New Helvetia all the laws of the country, to function as political authority and dispenser of justice, in order to prevent the robberies committed by interlopers from the United States, to stop the hunting and trading by companies from the Columbia River. The governor stipulated however that for Sutter to qualify for land ownership, he had to reside in the territory for a year and become a Mexican citizen, which he did to assuage the governor on August 29, 1840.

However, shortly after his land tract was granted and his fort was erected, Sutter quickly reneged on his agreement to discourage Euro-White trespass. On the contrary, Sutter aided the migration of whites to California. "I gave passports to those entering the country... and this (Bautista) did not like it... I encouraged immigration, while they discouraged it. I sympathized with the (white) Americans while they hated them", Sutter declared.

When the settlement was completed in 1841, he received title to 48,827 acres on the Sacramento River. The site is now part of the California state capital of Sacramento. In order to build his fort and develop a large ranching/farming network in the area, Sutter needed Native brown skin laborers. They were captured and then subjected to varying degrees of coercion and slavery. Sutter believed that Native Americans had to be kept "strictly under fear" in order to serve white landowners. Housing and working conditions at the fort were very poor, and have been described as enslavement, with uncooperative Indians being whipped, jailed, and executed.

Sutter's Native American new slaves slept on bare floors in locked rooms without sanitation and ate from troughs made from hollowed tree trunks. Housing conditions for white man workers living in nearby villages and rancherías was described as being more favorable. Freemason Pierson Barton

Reading, Sutter's fort manager, wrote in a letter to a relative that "the Indians of California make as obedient and humble slaves as the Negro in the South".

If natives refused to work for him, Sutter responded with violence. Observers accused him of using "kidnapping, food privation, and slavery" in order to force the natives to work for him. Theodor Cordua, a German immigrant who leased land from Sutter, wrote:

"When Sutter established himself in 1839 in the Sacramento Valley, new misfortune came upon these peaceful natives of the country. Their services were demanded immediately. Those who did not want to work were considered as enemies. With other tribes the field was taken against the hostile Indian. Declaration of war was not made. The villages were attacked usually before daybreak when everybody was still asleep. Neither old nor young was spared by the enemy, and often the Sacramento River was colored red by the blood of the innocent Indians, for these villages usually were situated at the banks of the rivers. During a campaign one section of the attackers fell upon the village by way of land. All the Indians of the attacked village naturally fled to find protection on the other bank of the river. But there they were awaited by the other half of the enemy and thus the unhappy people were shot and killed with rifles from both sides of the river. Seldom an Indian escaped such an attack, and those who were not murdered were captured. All children from six to fifteen years of age were usually taken by the greedy white people. The village was burned down and the few Indians who had escaped with their lives were left to their fate."

Heinrich Lienhard, a Swiss immigrant that served as Sutter's majordomo, wrote of the treatment of the enslaved once captured:

"As the room had neither beds nor straw, the inmates were forced to sleep on the bare floor. When I opened the door for them in the morning, the odor that greeted me was overwhelming, for no sanitary arrangements had been provided. What these rooms were like after ten days or two weeks can be imagined, and the fact that nocturnal confinement was not agreeable to the Indians was obvious. Large numbers deserted during the daytime or remained outside the fort when the gates were locked."

Lienhard also claimed that Sutter was known to rape his Indian captives, even girls as young as 12 years old. Numerous visitors to Sutter's Fort noted the shock of this sight in their diaries, alongside their discontent for his kidnapping of native tribal children who were sold into bondage to repay Sutter's debts or given as gifts. American explorer and mountain man James Clyman reported in 1846 that:

"The Capt. [Sutter] keeps 600 to 800 Indians in a complete state of Slavery and as I had the mortification of seeing them dine I may give a short description. 10 or 15 Troughs 3 or 4 feet long were brought out of the cook room and seated in the Broiling sun. All the Labourers grate [sic] and small ran to the troughs like so many pigs and fed themselves with their hands as long as the troughs contained even a moisture."

Dr. Waseurtz af Sandels, a Swedish explorer who visited California in 1842-1843, also wrote about Sutter's brutal treatment of Indian slaves in 1842:

"I could not reconcile my feelings to see these fellows being driven, as it were, around some narrow troughs of hollow tree trunks, out of which, crouched on their haunches, they fed more like beasts than human beings, using their hands in hurried manner to convey to their mouths the thin porage [sic] which was served to them. Soon they filed off to the fields after having, I fancy, half satisfied their physical wants."

These concerns were even shared by Juan Bautista Alvarado, then Governor of Alta California, who deplored Sutter's ill-treatment of indigenous Californians in 1845:

"The public can see how inhuman were the operations of Sutter who had no scruples about depriving Indian mothers of their children. Sutter has sent these little Indian children as gifts to people who live far from the place of their birth, without demanding of them any promises that in their homes the Indians should be treated with kindness."

Despite his promises to the Mexican government, Sutter was hospitable to Euro-White American pillagers entering the region and provided an impetus for many of them to settle there. The hundreds of thousands of acres which these men took from the Native Americans had been critical sources of food and resources. As the Euro-White Americano settlers took over the lands, over two million head of livestock were said to have been killed by shooting wild game in enormous numbers. They also replaced the native grasses and wilderness with wheat fields. Today, less than 2% of native grass fields are in California. Available food for native people in the region greatly diminished to starve out the indigenous brown skins.

In August 1846, an article in The Californian declared that in respect to California Indians, "The only effectual means of stopping inroads upon the property of the country, will be to attack them in their villages." When the natives tried to defend themselves, on February 28, 1847, Sutter ordered the Kern and Sutter massacres in retaliation. Much of Sutter's labor practices were illegal under Mexican law. However, in April 22, 1850, following the annexation of California by the United States, the California state legislature passed the "Act for the Government and Protection of Indians," legalizing the kidnapping and forced servitude of Indians by White settlers. Oh, the irony of the new laws name!

The California Act for the Government and Protection of Indians was enacted in 1850 (amended 1860, repealed 1863). This law provided for "apprenticing" or indenturing Native Mexican Californio children to the Euro-Whites Americano's, as well as punish "vagrant" brown skins by "hiring" them out to the highest bidder at a public auction if the 'Indian' could not provide sufficient bond or bail. The law allowed Native Americans to be sold into indentured servitude for minor offenses and separated children from their families. Euro White occupiers took 24,000 to 27,000 California Native Americans as forced laborers, including 4,000 to 7,000 children. This 1851 legislative measure not only gave settlers the right to organize lynch mobs to kill native people but allowed them to submit their expenses to the government. By 1852 the state had authorized over a million dollars for the bounty of such claims or $35 million in today's dollars. In 1856, a San Francisco Bulletin editorial stated:

"Extermination is the quickest and cheapest remedy, and effectually prevents all other difficulties when an outbreak [of Indian violence] occurs." In 1860 the legislature passed a law expanding the age and condition of Indians available for forced slavery. A Sacramento Daily Union article of the time accused high-pressure lobbyists interested in profiting off enslaved Indians of pushing the law through, gave examples of how wealthy individuals had abused the law to acquire Indian slaves from the reservations, and stated, The Act authorizes as complete a system of slavery, without any of the checks and wholesome restraints of slavery, as ever was devised."

A Native American activist and former Sonoma State University Professor, Ed Castillo, was asked by The State of California's Native American Heritage Commission to write the state's official history of the genocide; he wrote that:

"Well-armed death squads combined with the widespread random killing of Indians by individual miners resulted in the death of 100,000 Indians in 1848 and 1849 alone".

As you will read further, it appears more than likely that the California Gold Rush (CGR) was promoted to hide the massacres and genocides to remove the native Mexican Californio's. Not only bounties were offered to rid the natives and remove them from their lands they occupied all the way back to the Ancient Ones, but the Euro-White's also brought their favorite genocide manmade plagues over from Europe to eliminate large populations using blankets infected with small pox and vaccinations. The whole idea of vaccinations, and that one person could contaminate another, was created and invented by Jesuit, Dr. Edward Jenner in the 18th century. Smallpox and other epidemics "broke out" as soon as Euro-White Americano's arrived — 1800- 1801, 1824, 1836, 1853, and 1863. Small-pox laced blankets and vaccinations were given to the natives along with bringing malaria and cholera virus' to the Mexican Californio's, who had no resistance to the Euro-White American's diseases and shots, died off en masse immediately. The native brown skins were offered whatever they had to the invading army of Euro-White Americano's as kind gifts and offering. In return, the EWA gave them the deadly toxic blankets, and cholera, and measles, and other white man diseases.

The spreading of smallpox throughout Mexico, up through San Diego, into Los Angeles and all the way up the Pacific Northwest beginning in the 1830's, decimated the Ancient One's native tribes up through the 1910's. The induced plagues and death by inoculation were fully sponsored, and funded in toto, by the USA Inc. government as well.

The story goes that the smallpox outbreak of 1828 was introduced by a fur trading ship that docked in San Francisco. Seven years later, smallpox appeared in Sitka, Alaska, the capital of Russian America. Yes, Russia and Euro-White America were corporate partners back then. How they formed such an alliance back in the mid 1800's when communication was only by horse overland or ship, is unknown.

What followed fits a pattern that has been noted since Roman times - epidemics begin in ports of entry and spread from there. Within a year, it had reached hundreds of miles north over much of modern-day Alaska and south into British territory around Puget Sound. Smallpox was said to soon arrive by Russian ship at Fort Ross, we are told/sold.

By then, California missions had been disbanded by the Mexican government. General Mariano Guadalupe Vallejo, a native Mexi-Cali native turned traitor to his people, had taken possession of the Sonoma mission property (now the Sonoma Mission Inn) and established a military presence there representing US interests. In late 1837, before the virus was detected, he sent a cavalry unit led by corporal Ignacio Miramontes and accompanied by Indian auxiliaries, to Fort Ross to bring back supplies for the troops to Sonoma. It is said that they then passed the disease on to the native people there.

The disease was already spreading rapidly and people perished by the hundreds where populations were not even a thousand in some tribes. From there, smallpox cut a wide swath through across to the North Bay and up north to Mendocino County to Clear Lake and beyond. It was 8 The Incredible Story of the Founding of California by Genocide on Its Native People a terrifying time - hoping for a cure, many natives entered their sweat-houses and then plunged into cold water. But it was no use. Whole villages were struck down without a single survivor. For years after, the bones of thousands were left unburied and bleached the hills of Sonoma and Napa counties. Chief Solano, Vallejo's friend, estimated that his tribe, which had numbered in many thousands, was reduced to just 200 survivors. The death toll may have exceeded 90%, on par with other places in the Americas.

The plannedemic in the North Bay continued into 1839. The population of Native California's were reduced by 90% from the mid 1849 to 1852 alone. From more than 300,000 down to 24,000 California's in a series of some 162 recorded massacres in California along with induced disease and forced slavery to the survivors. California and Mormon militias and militiamen regiments were formed. Their death squads, formed and sponsored by the US army, were loaded with Freemason sanctioned hit men, like Kit Carson and Buffalo Bill, who joined the US California Militia.

The Mormon's formed their own militia sponsored by Freemason Brigham Young, representing the Church of Latter-Day Saints, and were in California by 1845. Additionally, as you will read further, the Mormons were already bringing back gold to Salt Lake City in 1847 and even had a mint in operation by 1849. This alone proves the false narrative of his-story that gold was 'discovered' in 1848 by John Marshal.

Songbird Covid 2023 ~ Quarantine Camps for All

By 2024, the COVID-19 has been mutated into COVID-23 and the world is in its fourth Quarantine year. In the United States, the nation’s government is converted into a fascist police state and the people are required to take temperature checks on their cell phones while those infected with COVID-23 are taken from their homes against their will and forced into quarantine camps, also known as “Q-Zones” or concentration camps, where some fight back against the brutal restrictions. In these camps, the infected are left to die or forcibly get better.

Sharing with us the sobering news that Wal Mart founder Sam Walton used to run prisoner of war camps for the United States military we have to ask, should a 'conspiracy theorist' still wear a tinfoil hat once the latest 'conspiracy' is proven fact?

Final Rule for Control of Communicable Diseases: Interstate and Foreign

The Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) published the final rule for the Control of Communicable Diseases on January 19th, 2017 which includes amendments to the current domestic \(interstate\) and foreign quarantine regulations for the control of communicable diseases. These amendments have been made in response to public comments received regarding the notice of proposed rulemaking published on August 15, 2016. This final rule improves CDC's ability to protect against the introduction, transmission, and spread of communicable diseases while ensuring due process. This rule became effective on March 21st, 2017. The final rule is published on the Office of the Federal Register's website .

The CDC published an 88-page set of proposed regulations on August 15, 2016, which would give them the power to apprehend, detain, and quarantine anyone they think might have a communicable disease and to force them to be vaccinated. The federal government derives its authority for isolation and quarantine from the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution. Under section 361 of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S. Code § 264), the U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services is authorized to take measures to prevent the entry and spread of communicable diseases from foreign countries into the United States and between states. The authority for carrying out these functions on a daily basis has been delegated to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). Under 42 Code of Federal Regulations parts 70 and 71, CDC is authorized to detain, medically examine, and release persons arriving into the United States and traveling between states who are suspected of carrying these communicable diseases.

These proposed rules would dramatically expand their authority, even though they claim the proposed regulations are mostly about providing updated language to describe their existing powers. These new regulations would give the CDC, and those who must comply with these regulations,

The film follows Nico — who is immune to the virus, as is signaled by his yellow "Livestrong" bracelet — on his way to rescue his girlfriend Sara from the body snatchers/COVID police:

the right to invade our privacy whenever they wish. They would have the right to involuntarily apprehend and confine anyone they believe might have a communicable disease. They would have the right to force people to accept vaccinations even when individuals object.

With the new powers granted by the proposed regulations, it won't be long until "public health" nurses armed with vaccine loaded syringes, and "Homeland Security" officers armed with guns and tasers, go door to door to force vaccinate the United States population for a list of preapproved communicable diseases.

The Great Reset Agenda

The World Economic Forum, with their Rothschild child, literally and genetically, Darth Vader, Klaus Van Schwab, has laid out their agenda extremely clearly that we will all in the world “Own Nothing and Be Happy”. This scenario is on the agenda to be carried out in 2025 and they are well on their way towards achieving this might world control of all humanity through smart dust in aerosol spraying, the fake food with nanobots, the hydra vulgaris. Darth Schwab is a Rothschild family member who control all banking and commerce.

Yuval Noah Harari has a plan to control people with “organism hacking.”

 Pallavi Mar 17, 2022 3:06:08 PM

Allow me to introduce Klaus Schwab's top advisor, Professor Yuval Noah Harari.

STORY AT-A-GLANCE

- › According to Klaus Schwab, founder and executive chairman of the World Economic Forum (WEF), the goal of The Fourth Industrial Revolution is to change what it means to be human by merging man and machine
- › Humans are now “hackable,” in that technology now exists by which a company or government can know you better than you know yourself, and that can be very dangerous if misused
- › Professor Yuval Noah Harari predicts that algorithms will increasingly be used to make decisions that have historically been made by humans, either yourself or someone else, including whether or not you’ll be hired for a particular job, whether you’ll be granted a loan, what scholastic curriculum you will follow and even who you will marry
- › Harari warns that if we allow the establishment of a digital dictatorship, where the system, be it a corporation or a government, knows the most intimate details about each and every person, it will be impossible to dismantle it. Its control will be total and irreversible
- › If you believe that your thoughts and behavior are and always will remain under your own control, think again. We already have the technology to directly alter thoughts, emotions and behavior

In a November 2019 interview with CNN, history professor and bestselling author Yuval Noah Harari, a Klaus Schwab disciple, warned that “humans are now hackable animals,” meaning, the technology now exists by which a company or government can know you better than you know yourself, and that can be very dangerous if misused.

He predicted that algorithms will increasingly be used to make decisions that historically have been made by humans, either yourself or someone else, including whether or not you’ll be hired for a particular job, whether you’ll be granted a loan, what scholastic curriculum you will follow and even who you will marry.

There are profound dangers head for us all. There’s also an ever-increasing risk of being manipulated by these outside forces that you’re not even fully aware of. Looking back over the last two years, it’s rather easy to confirm that mass manipulation is taking place at a staggering scale, and that it’s phenomenally effective. As noted by Harari in 2019, the available capabilities already go far beyond Orwell’s “1984” authoritarian vision, and it’s only going to become more powerful from here. He’s certain that in short order, there will be the ability to monitor your emotional state through something as simple as a wearable wristband.

You may dutifully smile and clap when listening to a speech by a government official, but they'll know you're angry or don't agree with what's being said, and could therefore take action against you based on your most personal, internal emotions rather than what you outwardly express.

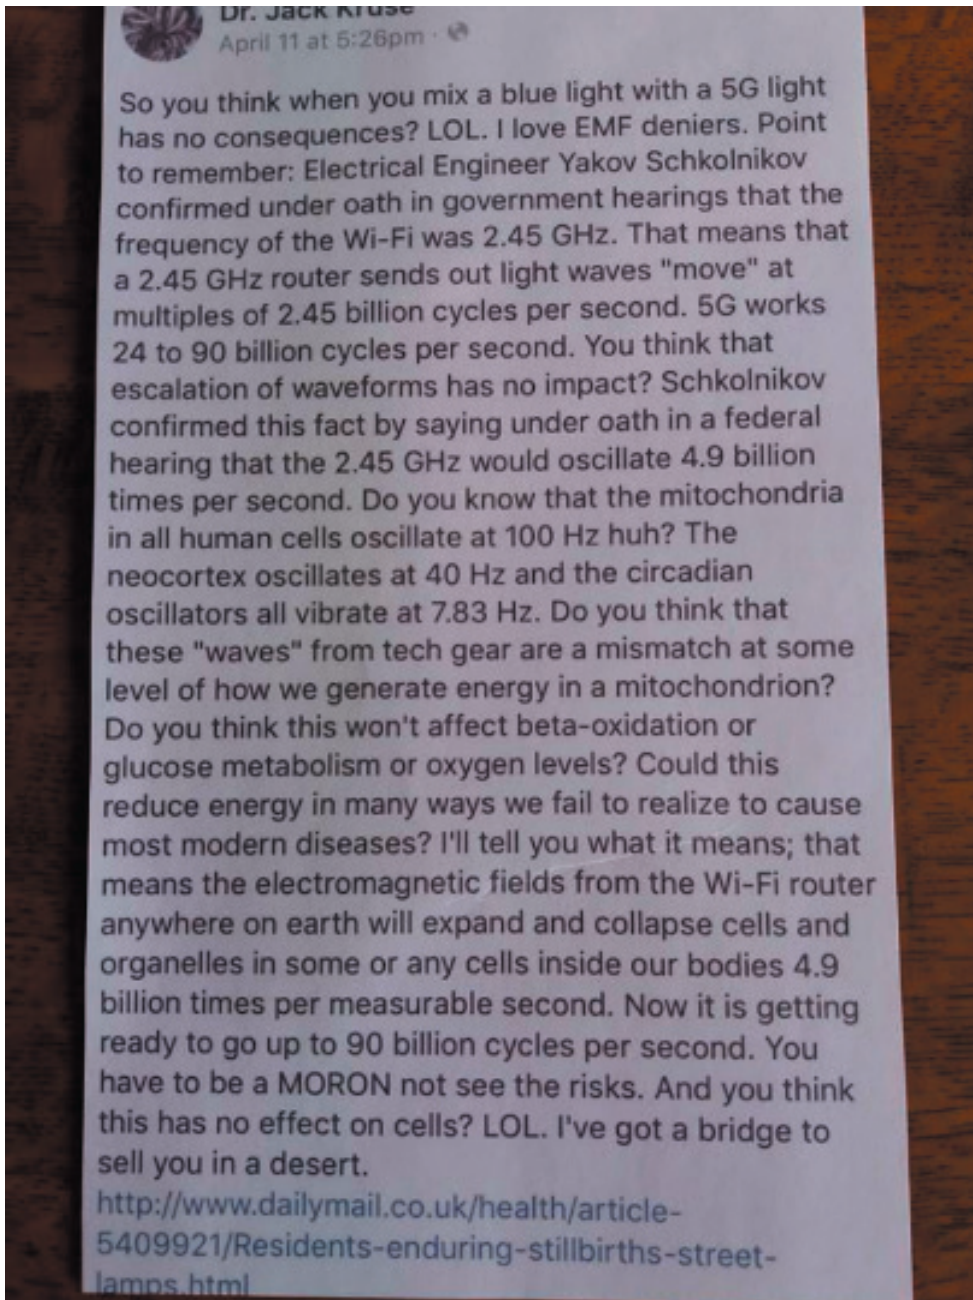

Importantly, Harari warned that if we allow the establishment of this kind of digital dictatorship, where the system, be it a corporation or a government, knows the most intimate details about each and every person, it will be impossible to dismantle it. Its control will be total and irreversible. And, Harari believes we may have only a decade, at most two, to prevent this digital dictatorship from taking over.

Their plans are for reengineering Life Itself. Harari also discussed the coming transhumanism at the WEF's 2020 annual meeting in Davos and in this speech, he went even further. Not only does the global elite have the technological capability to create a global digital dictatorship, but "elites may gain the power to reengineer the future of life itself."

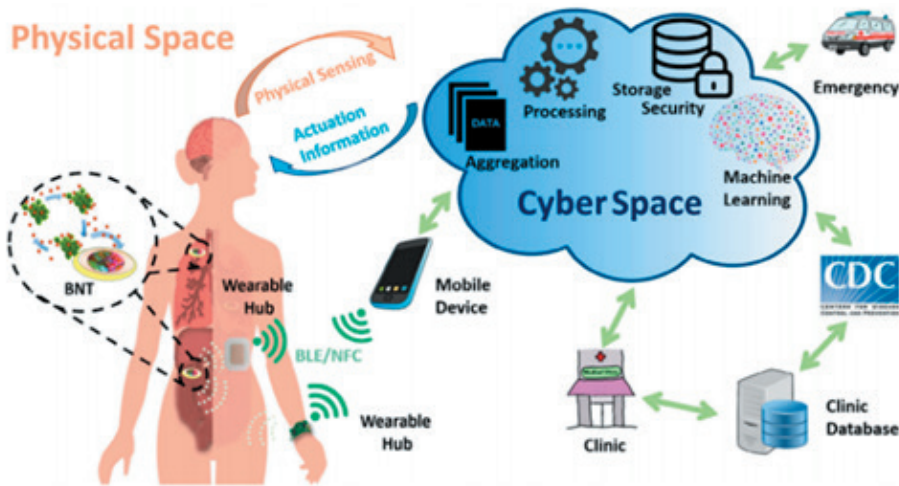

"For four billion years, nothing fundamental changed in the basic rules of the game of life," he said. "All of life was subject to the laws of natural selection and the laws of organic biochemistry. But this is now about to change. Science is replacing evolution by natural selection with evolution by intelligent design, not the intelligent design of some god in the clouds, [but] OUR intelligent design, and the design of our 'clouds,' the IBM cloud, the Microsoft cloud. These are the new driving forces of evolution."

It's hard to determine whether Harari is for or against transhumanism. He speaks of it as an inevitability, and something that can be used for tremendous good. But he also recognizes its profound dangers and seems to believe we need to discuss how these technological capabilities can be used, and whether they should. In the featured Davos speech, it sounds as though he's a proponent of this human intelligent design venture, but in his 2019 interview with CNN, he also stated that "we must never underestimate the stupidity of humans." The fact that we have the technology to design new life forms, including new kinds of humans, does not necessarily mean that we're smart enough to design something better than what natural evolution has come up with thus far.

In his Davos speech, Harari also pointed out that science is now enabling us to create life not only in the organic realm but in the inorganic realm as well. We're talking about "living" robots and the like. He also raises the question as to who "owns" your DNA, if it can be charted and hacked. Does it belong to you, a corporation, or the government?

According to their manifesto, the Days of Free Will Are Over. Whatever Harari's true feelings about transhumanism, he emphatically states that the idea that we have a soul and free will, those days "are over." In other clips that have been inserted into the featured video, Harari predicts that in the future, people will be able to look back and see that the COVID pandemic was the turning point where biological surveillance took over and became norm.

The explanation for how that was able to occur is given by Schwab, who has publicly admitted (see featured video) that participants in the WEF's Young Global Leaders program have "penetrated the cabinets" of many world governments.

In Canada, for example, about half the politicians, including Prime Minister Justin Trudeau, have taken Schwab's training. Schwab is all about ushering in transhumanism and changing what it means to be human, and his minions of global leaders are sure doing everything they can to make those dreams a reality. This is a dystopian future WEF and its global allies are actively trying to implement, whether humanity at large agrees with it or not.

Head in the Cloud! Changing What It Means To Be Human

Darth Schwab dreams of a world in which humans are connected to the cloud, able to access the internet through their own brains. This, of course, also means that your brain would be accessible to people who might like to tinker with your thoughts, emotions, beliefs and behavior, be they the technocratic elite themselves or random hackers. If you believe that your thoughts and behavior are and always will remain under your own control, think again. We already have the technology to directly alter thoughts, emotions and behavior. Some of these capabilities are described in a 2021 project report by the U.K. Ministry of Defense, created in partnership with the German Bundeswehr Office for Defense Planning.

“Human augmentation can ‘directly enhance behavior.’ And if you can change a person’s behavior in a positive way, you can also control it to the person’s own detriment.”

The report, “Human Augmentation – The Dawn of a New Paradigm, a Strategic Implications Project”, reviews the scientific goals of the U.K. and German defense ministries, and they are precisely what the title suggests. Human augmentation is stressed as being a key area to focus on in order to win future wars:

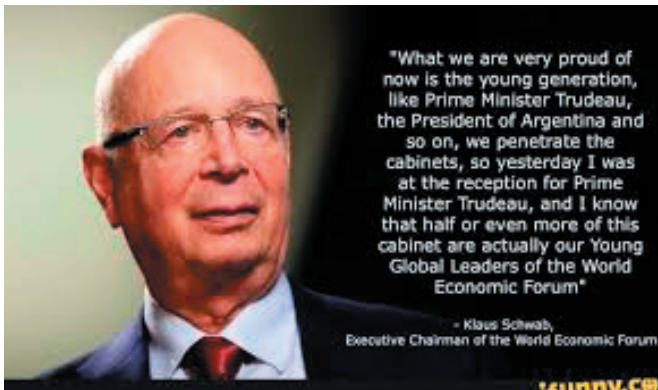

“Human augmentation will become increasingly relevant, partly because it can directly enhance human capability and behavior and partly because it is the binding agent between people and machines.”

If you can enhance behavior, that means you can change someone’s behavior. And if you can change a person’s behavior in a positive way, you can also control it to the person’s own detriment. Theoretically, absolutely anyone, any random civilian with a brain-to-cloud connection and the needed biological augmentation (such as strength or speed) could be given wireless instructions to carry out an assassination, for example, and pull it off flawlessly, even without prior training. Alternatively, their physical body could temporarily be taken over by a remote operator with the prerequisite skills. Proof of concept already exists, and is reviewed by Dr. Charles Morgan, professor in the department of national security at the University of New Haven, in the lecture below. Using the internet and brain implants, thoughts can be transferred from one person to another. The sender can also directly influence the physical movements of the receiver.

Project Immortality

Historically, the striving for immortality has been a faith-based venture, based in the idea that the soul is immortal while the body perishes, which is a concept I am in complete alignment with. Transhumanists more or less reverse this idea. They discard the notion of soul altogether and aim for the preservation of the perceived personality, first through radical life extension of the physical body, and later through the transfer of brain data into a replacement form. According to Dmitry Itskov, the Russian founder of the Immortality 2045 project, only 2% of people are ready to accept death, a statistic that he uses to justify the search for immortality through things like artificial organs, artificial body constructs, the simulation of mental processes and, ultimately, the transferring of one's mind into an artificial carrier.

The goals of this project include not only the creation of the cybernetic technologies needed to achieve an immortal body, but also the creation of "a new philosophical paradigm for humanity." Schwab has talked about the same thing, using the term "social contract" rather than "philosophical paradigm."

The Immortality 2045's vision, published in 2011, starts with the creation of the first robotic copy of a human body that can be remotely controlled by 2020. By 2025, they want an avatar into which the human brain can be transplanted at the end of life. By 2035, they want an avatar with a synthetic brain, into which the human personality can be transferred and, by 2045, they imagine a holographic-like avatar. Itskov says:

"The aim of the first project, known as 'Avatar,' is the creation of a robot copy of a human being controllable through a 'brain-computer' interface. When I'm asked to give the gist of this project, I tell people to recall the film 'Surrogates,' which depicts a world in which every person has an artificial body that he controls remotely. The makers of that blockbuster put an accent on the negative side of such a scenario. Nonetheless, the film's highly graphic demonstration of the idea allows one to get an immediate sense of what it is."

Does living through an avatar sound like a life devoid of spirituality to you? Not so, Itskov says, because by ending our dependency on our physical bodies, "many things will open up spiritually." I have my doubts about that, as most spiritual adepts will tell you that being hooked on technology tends to hinder rather than elevate spiritual pursuits, which are most easily achieved by living simply, in close contact with the natural world. I just don't foresee being able to elevate spiritually when any number of outside parties can access your brain and dictate what you think, feel and believe. Transhumanists like Itskov tend to focus only on the perceived benefits of synthetic life. For example, he promises that his avatars will be affordable for everyone who wants them, regardless of income bracket.

Yet the WEF has clearly announced that by 2030, nobody will own anything, and while not clearly stated, that will likely even include your own body. So, to think that your avatar would be "yours" is probably unrealistic. Looked at through the lens of the WEF's Fourth Industrial Revolution, it seems the plan is for the elite to literally own all of humanity, refashioned to their own liking. And, if people can be hacked and controlled remotely, then we can be sure they will be. That's particularly true for synthetic or mechanical avatars that can't "live" or "remain conscious" without a cloud connection.

Resource to Understand the Transhuman Agenda – Blockchained

Corey Lynn is a top-notch investigative journalist who covers topics the mainstream won't touch, including the transhumanist agenda. On her website, you can find select chapters from her book, "Global Landscape on Vaccine ID Passports." Chapter 4 in the book is titled "Block chained," which explains what digital identity is all about. Digital ID is not just a piece of identification, with which you can prove who you are. It will collect and monitor ALL of your data, from your personal finances, education, work history, GPS location 24/7, everything you've ever typed on your computer, your search history, social media presence, emotional status and physical biometrics, down to your DNA.

Big Data, Data Sharing and AI

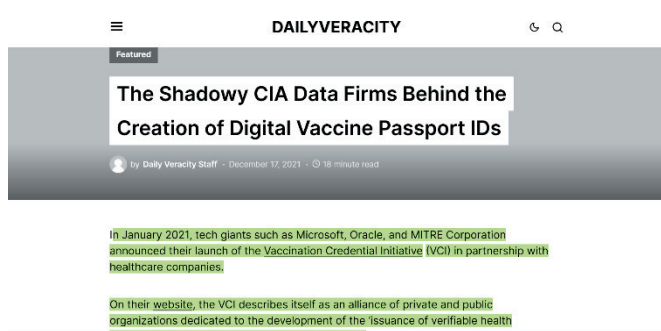

Make no mistake, transhumanism is the ultimate goal of the technocratic elite, and both "big data" and AI are integral components of that. Without one or both of those, the transhumanist dream is dead in the water. The goal of transhumanism is undoubtedly why there's been so much focus on those two areas in the first place. So, remember, data gathering, data sharing and AI are not about making your life more convenient. They're to make you obsolete. The intention is to replace you with a synthetic copy of you that can be remotely controlled.

In 2021, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), an intergovernmental organization that consists of 38 countries that work with various working groups and policy makers, issued a report on the “State of Implementation of the OECD AI principles.” So far, 46 countries have adopted these AI principles. The strategy is to develop centralized repositories of public datasets in each country and then enable public-private data sharing to build a vast network where each dataset is connected with all the others.

Biosecurity Will Be Used to Justify Surveillance Tyranny

Another report, by the National Security Commission on Artificial Intelligence (NSCAI), founded “to advance the development of artificial intelligence” and “comprehensively address the national security and defense needs of the United States,” highlights the need to combat digital disinformation and prioritizing biosecurity. To help with that, a U.S. government-funded supercomputer is being set up at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory under

Digital ID in Ontario

Where you could use digital ID

To help you understand where it could work, here are some examples of future digital ID uses.

As an individual, you could use digital ID to prove your identity when you:

- make an age-sensitive purchase (like a lottery ticket)
- pick up a package at the post office
- apply for government assistance (such as disability support) or benefits (such as CERB or EI)
- access and use vaccination records
- open a bank account

As a business, you could use digital ID when you:

- hire new employees
- prove business identity/credentials or verify those of other businesses
- open business accounts
- apply for loans, grants, tax credits
- verify customers' identity

the direction of the Department of Energy. This AI supercomputer can do more than 1 quintillion calculations per second.

Some of this data sharing is already taking place. As noted by Corey, NATO launched an in-house biometrics system for data sharing between nations in November 2020, and in May 2021, the U.S. military merged its biometrics-enabled watch list with the Department of Defense's automated biometric identification system (ABIS).

"They are working on multi-modal fusion matching and improving biometric face-matching capability through AI and machine learning, and have already improved their long-range infrared cameras, Looking toward the near future, they are also focused on palm print biometrics, faces in crowds, integration to identify threats online, and non-traditional latent DNA collection."

Biometric privacy laws won't stop them from achieving their agenda since they own the legal systems, the economic systems and the electronic systems.

While surveillance science is moving at lightning speed, regulations and privacy laws are trailing at a snail's pace. A federal biometric privacy bill, the National Biometric Information Privacy Act, was introduced in 2020 but didn't go anywhere. In the U.S., a handful of states do have biometric privacy laws, Illinois' being one of the strictest but the vast majority have no such protections in place. As reported by Corey:

"The Illinois Biometric Information Privacy Act (BIPA) requires private entities to inform people in writing that their information is being collected and stored, what the purpose is, and term for collection and storage, and must secure a written release from the person. Those same private entities are not allowed to sell, lease, trade, or profit from a person's biometric information. A person may file suit at $1,000 for each negligent violation or $5,000 for each intentional or reckless violation, plus attorneys' fees and costs. Actual harm is not required to establish standing."

Clearly, we need these kinds of protections everywhere, in all states and all countries, because as it stands, the global cabal of transhumanist technocrats are building a data-sharing system that is intended to become global. The lack of legal protections against data collection, analysis and sharing is what allows this reckless expansion of surveillance. As noted by Corey:

"If it's not crystal clear by now, globalists and eugenicists (sometimes one in the same) are running the show, and they are working very hard at achieving their ultimate desires of a controlled human race, evolution of transhumanism" with a strong artificial intelligence taking the place of many humans, while they fly to Mars during their years of immortality, and observe humanity through endless surveillance systems. But their dream only becomes a reality if people allow it to."

This "Future of Humans" book is targeted for children 7 & up! In this book they describe how the transhuman children will be tied to the cloud and controlled by electronic devices and "Happy Pills" will be given to all who wish to experience virtual vacations, self-induced orgasms and beyond pleasurable life experiences. All designed to remove the Souls and Spirit of our children for all future.

The Singularity

The technological singularity – or simply the singularity^[1] – is a hypothetical point in time at which technological growth becomes uncontrollable and irreversible, resulting in unforeseeable changes to human civilization.^{[2][3]} According to the most popular version of the singularity hypothesis, called intelligence explosion, an upgradable intelligent agent will eventually enter a “runaway reaction” of self-improvement cycles, each new and more intelligent generation appearing more and more rapidly, causing an “explosion” in intelligence and resulting in a powerful superintelligence that qualitatively far surpasses all human intelligence.

By the time we get to the 2040s, we'll be able to multiply human intelligence a billionfold. That will be a profound change that's singular in nature. Computers are going to keep getting smaller and smaller. Ultimately, they will go inside our bodies and brains and make us healthier, make us smarter.

– Ray Kurzweil

Double Quotes
doublequotes.net

A superintelligence, hyperintelligence, or superhuman intelligence is a quantum computer processing agent that possesses intelligence far surpassing that of the brightest and most gifted human minds. “Superintelligence” may also refer to the form or degree of intelligence possessed by such an agent. John von Neumann, Vernor Vinge and Ray Kurzweil define the concept in terms of the technological creation of super intelligence, arguing that it is difficult or impossible for present-day humans to predict what human beings’ lives would be like in a post-singularity world.

Most proposed methods for creating superhuman or transhuman minds fall into one of two categories: intelligence amplification of human brains and artificial intelligence. The many speculated ways to augment human intelligence include bioengineering, genetic engineering, nootropic drugs, AI assistants, direct brain-computer interfaces and mind uploading. These multiple paths to an intelligence explosion makes a singularity more likely, as they would all have to fail for a singularity not to occur.

All and all, this is a designed takeover of what it means to be human with no free will, no say, and no control over whether you want this for you and your loved ones, or not. There is no 'opt out' choice here.

The Internet of Bodies, or IoB, is actually an ecosystem. It's a bunch of devices that are connected to the Internet that contain software and that either collect personal health data about you or can alter the body's function. We think of the Internet of Bodies as this collection of all these devices, as well as all the data that the devices are gathering about you. The Internet of Bodies, or IoB, is actually an ecosystem. We think of the Internet of Bodies as this collection of all these devices, as well as all the data that the devices are gathering about you. And in health care, Internet of Bodies has been around for quite a while. With the advent of the Internet, it makes a lot of sense to connect your pacemaker to the Internet so that your doctor can be automatically notified if something weird happens, if there's an anomaly. It's natural in a lot of ways to want to understand more about your body, how it functions, how well it's doing.

IoB devices are set to revolutionize health care. Unprecedented amounts of personal health data will be downloaded from you through imbedded AI and report to your telemedicine doctor. They will then prescribe your nutritional insecticide foods based on your personal DNA, according to the W.E.F.

There are pills now that have an electronic sensor that let a health care provider know whether you have taken the medication. Other things, like precision medicine, so precision medicine is the idea of creating pharmaceuticals or treatment specifically for your body, for your personalized treatment.

Post Gendersim

Advocates of postgenderism argue that the presence of gender roles, social stratification, and gender differences are generally to the detriment of individuals and society. Given the radical potential for advanced assistive reproductive options, postgenderists believe that sex for reproductive purposes will either become obsolete or that all post-gendered humans will have the ability, if they so choose, to both carry a pregnancy to term and ‘father’ a child, which, postgenderists believe, would have the effect of eliminating the need for definite genders in such a society.

Since the Obama administration, those wishing to eliminate male and female restrooms have now succeeded. No longer can a women have privacy and a male can walk in anytime where she is relieving herself. Schools and universities (including Johns Hopkins and Michigan State), museums (like the American Folk Art Museum in New York City and the Utah Museum of Fine Arts in Salt Lake City), restaurants both trendy and modest (such as the Pass & Provisions in Houston and the Midtown Cafe in Santa Cruz, Calif.) and even the White House (in the Eisenhower Executive Office Building) are recasting the traditional men’s/ women’s room, resulting in a dizzying range of (often creative) signage and vocabulary.

Part of the reason is legal. Seattle, Berkeley, Santa Fe, Austin and Philadelphia are among the cities that have passed laws requiring single-user all-gender restrooms. Philadelphia has an online ‘Gotta Go Guide’ showing the location of such facilities, and there’s an app, ‘Refuge Restrooms’, that does the same nationwide. Oy vei’.

It has gotten so absurd that the newly Biden appointed attorney general said this during her hearing testimony in front of Congress.

Biography

James (Jamie) Lee, resides in the county of Mendocino in Northern California growing biodynamic and organic food at his 100-yr. old farm that he stewards for future generations.

He graduated from the school of business at San Diego State University as well as attended the Green MBA program at New College in Santa Rosa, California. He has had over 25 years' experience working on Wall Street beginning working for the investment banking firms, Furman, Selz, Inc. in New York City as an Institutional Sales Trader. He then moved back to San Francisco, California to work for Robertson, Colman, Stephens Investment Bank as a VP of Institutional Sales. In 1991, he founded a small investment/research boutique, JWL Investments, before walking away from Wall Street in 2007 to become a Truth Activist to try and help wake the world up to what he learned was going to be no less than the enslavement of all humanity through vaccine inoculations.

He spends most of his days now analyzing, investigating and exploring the hidden occult world behind the power bases we see in our government institutions today that few are even aware of, but should be made known to all. His work has been published on many alternative news websites including Waking Times, Activist Post, Philosophers-Stone, Reddit, Beforeitsnews.com, David Icke, StoptheCrime.net, ElanaFreeland.com, Rense.com, Natural News, Alex Jones, Sage of Quay and 2015 Most Censored

Stories as well as appeared on the internationally syndicated evening news show, Breaking the Set with Abby Martin in November of 2014. He was on the show because he helped spearhead historical legislation that he helped get passed in Mendocino County, California in November of 2014. The first ever laws passed in the country declared local rights of self-governance and community determination preempting state, federal and international law.
